Steinbeck by Karsh

JOHN STEINBECK, the late Nobel Prize-winning author and famous Monterey Peninsula resident, was captured on film by renowned portrait photographer Yousuf Karsh in 1954 in Paris. Karsh, who made a personal appearance in Carmel Friday, writing in his 1976 book Karsh Portraits, said of him: "Mr. Steinbeck had talked little during the sitting. His mind was on his own business...It seemed that a craftsman skilled in revealing the character of other people guarded himself jealously from prying eyes — that here was a courteous but reticent man who did not wear his heart on his sleeve. However, over refreshments served on the terrace, he thawed somewhat and volunteered an amusing little story..." Fifteen of Karsh's most famous portraits are now being exhibited at the Weston Gallery in Carmel. For more on Karsh turn to today's Arts and Leisure section. (Photo courtesy of Weston Gallery.)

THE FATE of many public, commercial and residential building projects has come under question as Carmel waits to find out whether it has exceeded its water allocation this year.

Potential projects that could be delayed include the Harrison Memorial Library annex, public restrooms in Piccadilly Park and the Robert D'Isidoro's Grunion Run restaurant-property development on Fourth Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets.

A water connection application for Mayor Clint Eastwood's office/retail complex next to the Hog's Breath Inn on San Carlos Street should be submitted this week, architect George Brook-Kotholow said.

If the city has exceeded or is at 100 percent of its 1,031 ac. ft. water allocation, "the rule is very explicit — no new water meters, period," said Bruce Buel, general manager of the water district.

The district should get Carmel's water use figures later this month, Buel said, and if Carmel has gone over, the district board could act at its Aug. 11 board meeting to stop issuing water connection permits. The moratorium could go into effect as soon as the next day, according to district officials.

Buel had told The Pine Cone last week that if Carmel has been using water at the same rate as the rest of the peninsula, it could be 5 ac. ft. over its allocation.

A meeting has been set July 28 between Eastwood and water district board chairman Dick Heuer to discuss Carmel's water allocation. The meeting is in response to a letter the city had sent to the district requesting an increase in its water allotment. The letter was sent prior to the city learning that it could have exceeded its allocation this year.

The resulting moratorium on construction would include any project which requires a water connection permit, whether or not there is a water meter on site already, or even if the project will not use more water than before. In addition, any request for an increase of water usage to an existing meter, such as the addition of a bathroom or sink to a private home, would be included.

Water meter applications in process and those already issued but not yet connected, will be serviced, Buel said.

Shared intelligence

Dear Editor:

I think there is no more beneficial way for young people to spend their spare time than in reading good solid literature. You can improve your spelling, your vocabulary, your grammar and your ability to write a good resume. It will help you write a good solid business or social letter.

Stay away from the garbage shows on TV and select the good nature and educational shows. You can learn a lot this way. This much is true.

Some of my friends and I get together occasionally to discuss local and world problems and this is also a good idea: share the intelligence.

Harold was speaking: "We have in America a very high incidence of teenage pregnancy and childbirth among unmarried children."

"You bet," said Bert. "Our young people must begin using condos and conundrums to stay out of trouble; entirely too many babies being born out of gridlock."

"You're right," said Baxter. "I was reading an article on that subject by an author who writes under a non — non de something or other."

I helped him out. "You mean he writes under a noon-day plum. That's an assumed name."

So this meeting together with a few friends can be invaluable in improving not only your vocabulary, but also it helps you to understand a little better the problems facing us in this crazy world.

Disappointed at board

Dear Editor:

I have long been a proponent of seeking good in any situation no matter how bad it may seem at first. Although I am keenly disappointed in the Board of Education of the Carmel Unified School District's decision not to lease two classrooms of the Carmelo School to the Waldorf School Foundation this fall, I have good news!

Dr. Robert Infelise, superintendent of the district, has promised to put these nine classrooms to better use. He stated that even that day he had met with Vance Baldwin to discuss using that site for a preschool with an expected enrollment of 30-60 students by September 1986. He has plans for using the school as a dance studio, workshop theater and an extension of the Carmel Valley High School. His plans and his enthusiasm for using the Carmelo School for public education, I applaud. I am sure it was his enthusiasm that led Mr. Hilton Bialek to propose a motion not to lease to the Waldorf School Foundation.

In the same vein I would also expect Mr. Bialek to propose a motion that the Carmelo School not be used another day in the illegal storage of hardware for a local business. In a meeting with Mr. Bialek and Mr. Baldwin they acknowledged receipt of a January 1986 letter putting them on notice that they were in direct violation of the California Education code!

So finally, after years of neglect, illegal use and disregard of its intended purpose our Carmelo School will once again be used for education. That was by September, wasn't it, Dr. Infelise? Because if you don't come through, your efforts have prevented the largest independent school movement in the world from residing in our Carmel Valley.

Landmark in jeopardy

Dear Editor:

Attention — the last vestige of the beauty and charm of one of Carmel's famous landmarks is in jeopardy — the Harrison Memorial Library.

The present building should be preserved with no tampering with its architecture. It has been painted and photographed by many famous artists, appearing on walls, in books and on postcards since 1930. It is a legendary landmark, known and appreciated worldwide.

Please support the New Annex on the already purchased property on the N.W. corner of Sixth and Lincoln.

Trifling with history

Dear Editor:

Clint Eastwood should know that the Marines did not fight at Heartbreak Ridge any more than the Army fought at Tarawa or Iwo Jima. I know because I was a soldier in Korea at the time Heartbreak Ridge was contested and was wounded in the vicinity of Heartbreak Ridge during a second tour a year and a half later.

In any event all one has to do is read U. S. Marine Operations in Korea, Volume IV, "The East Central Front, Fall 1951." This official history was written by the Historical Branch (G-3), Headquarters, USMC, Washington, D. C., and does not mention Heartbreak Ridge at all.

Valley Forge, Gettysburg, Iwo Jima, Heartbreak Ridge. Clint Eastwood should not trifle with history.

Hello Alice, hello P. T.

Dear Editor:

Alice in Wonderland would feel right at home in Carmel these days. The careful planning developed by many mayors and administrations can now be disregarded with flicks of the finger.

The demolition of the building across from the Adobe Inn is said to be a "remodeling job." The owner of the Bennett property near Third and Dolores asked to have it divided into 10 usable lots. The former planning commission, on the basis of terrain, agreed to five. Now the planning and conservation committee is recommending to the planning commission the granting of 11 lots!

Maybe P. T. Barnum would have a suitable word to apply to the residents of Carmel who think things are changing. They are. Hello, Alice, hello P. T.

EDITOR'S DESK BY MAC McDONALD

Off to fight the good fight

A TEAM of 18 Monterey Peninsula and Big Sur-area residents (and possibly more) will leave early Sunday on a plane to the East Coast to fight the good fight in Washington D.C.

The team — our version of The A-Team shall we say? — will be on hand July 31 to speak before a Senate subcommittee on the proposed Big Sur "federalization" bill co-sponsored by Sen. Pete Wilson, a Republican, and Sen. Alan Cranston, a Democrat. Most observers expect the bill to waltz through the Senate because of the support of both senators. The team will be on hand to make sure it won't be smooth dancing for the ill-advised bill.

Among those accompanying The A-Team will be former senator S.I. Hayakawa, who should have a few choice words for Cranston seeing how Hayakawa managed to thwart the senator's last bid to federalize Big Sur several years ago, and our own Rep. Leon Panetta, who is preparing himself for a battle in the House if the bill manages to get by the Senate.

In his wayward attempts to cram this bill down our throats Wilson has managed to alienate just about everyone here on the Central Coast, from Panetta and the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, to Big Sur residents, environmentalists, landowners, businesspeople, elected officials, and yes, newspaper editors. So, once again, we're forced to bring out the heavy artillery and bring the low-flying Wilson-Cranston blimp down to earth.

But the battle's just begun. There will undoubtedly be more hearings, perhaps even a field hearing here on the Monterey Peninsula, something that could really stir up some reactions. It would be an SOR show.

But it's important that the elected officials back East hear our voices loud and clear at this first hearing, however.

Those wishing to submit written comments can address remarks to: Sen. Malcom Wallop, chairman, Senate Subcommittee on Public Lands, Room SD-308, Senate Dirksen Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510.

Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition.

Carmel, we felt that something was missing but couldn't quite put our finger on it.

Dear friend Paula has been sending us occasional copies of the Pine Cone, keeps us up-to-date, and that's when it struck us — we were missing the Pine Cone and/or its equivalent.

Can you believe that an area such as this does not have anything remotely approaching the P/C? There are a couple of "Throwaway" weeklies that should be thrown away; a coastal daily that should be a weekly, and I am not misspelling that word. The rest of our news comes from the L. A. Times.

How we miss the council meeting reports; the little innuendos one comes to recognize as a resident; the business news and on and on. Where else in the West can 25 years go by without the library getting settled or Highway 1 expanded?

Come to think of it, if those matters ever get settled, your reporters will really have to scramble for news. Take care!

You have a wonderful staff that kept us interested and laughing at the crazy antics of those in power — thank goodness there are such people willing to devote the time to a better Carmel.

We miss you very much.

The nuclear menace

Dear Editor:

The tragic nuclear accident in the Soviet Union has heightened world awareness of nuclear danger to people and food supplies, but what about nuclear bombs? A nuclear power plant is at least supposed to have a useful purpose; nuclear bombs only kill people and destroy the earth. The ominous threat of 30,000 U.S. and 20,000 Soviet nuclear warheads looms over the world.

Looking at the arms race sensibly, it becomes clear that deployment of nuclear weapons serves to imperil and not protect the vital security of the United States.

It is urgent that President Reagan abandon his extravagant and technically impossible Star Wars scheme and take seriously the Soviet peace initiatives.

President Reagan's response to the Soviet moratorium on testing was three U.S. nuclear explosions, even though the Soviets had agreed to on-site inspection, and the six nations of the Five Continent Peace Initiative guaranteed verification. President Reagan also snubbed the Soviet proposal to rid the world of nuclear weapons by the year 2000.

The U.S. Senate and House of Representatives both have overwhelmingly passed resolutions for a comprehensive nuclear test ban, and recent polls show two-thirds of Americans want immediate serious negotiations for a moratorium on testing nuclear weapons. How can President Reagan continue to blatantly ignore the majority of U.S. citizens and their elected representatives?

With worldwide concern over the nuclear menace, it is urgent that the United States and the Soviet Union move toward elimination of nuclear weapons, starting at once with a test ban treaty.

Remembering the peninsula's 'Paisano Priest'

By JAMES PATRICK KINNEY

HE CALLED himself "The Paisano Priest," but he was also known as a linguist, poet, painter, sculptor, historian, writer, orator, wit, bon vivant and a great humanitarian.

Father Lawrence H. Farrell, a popular and much-beloved character on the Monterey Peninsula, died three years ago on July 30 in Monterey. He will be warmly remembered on the peninsula for a long time to come.

He was the only child of a Welsh-Irish saloonkeeper and an Irish-American mother. He was born Sept. 17, 1907, in Monterey, grew up on Larkin Street, attended Walter Colton School and Monterey Union High.

Of his early years, Farrell later said, "Everybody knew everybody. In our Larkin Street Gang, there were no divisions of nationality or economic status. We all played together. At school it was the same — Spanish, Mexican, Italian, Portuguese, Chinese, Japanese and even Irish. There couldn't have been a happier town to grow up in than Monterey."

In his junior year of high school, inspired by the example of Father Ramon Mestres, his pastor at San Carlos Church, he enrolled at St. Joseph's Catholic Seminary in Mountain View. After graduation his bishop sent him on to further studies at the University of Friburg in Switzerland. He finished his priestly education at Oscott College in Birmingham, England, during the Depression, and was finally ordained a priest at St. Austin's Church, Stafford, England, on July 4, 1937. He was then 30.

He returned to Monterey to offer a First Mass at San Carlos Church and then reported to his first parish assignment in Royal Leamington Spa near Birmingham.

When World War II began he joined the British Army and served as chaplain to the 59th Newfoundland Heavy Regiment Royal Artillery for the duration of the war.

He returned to the United States after the war and spent four years as Catholic chaplain at the California Correctional Facility for Women at Tehachapi. Following that assignment, he served again as chaplain for more than 20 years at Monterey County's Soledad prison.

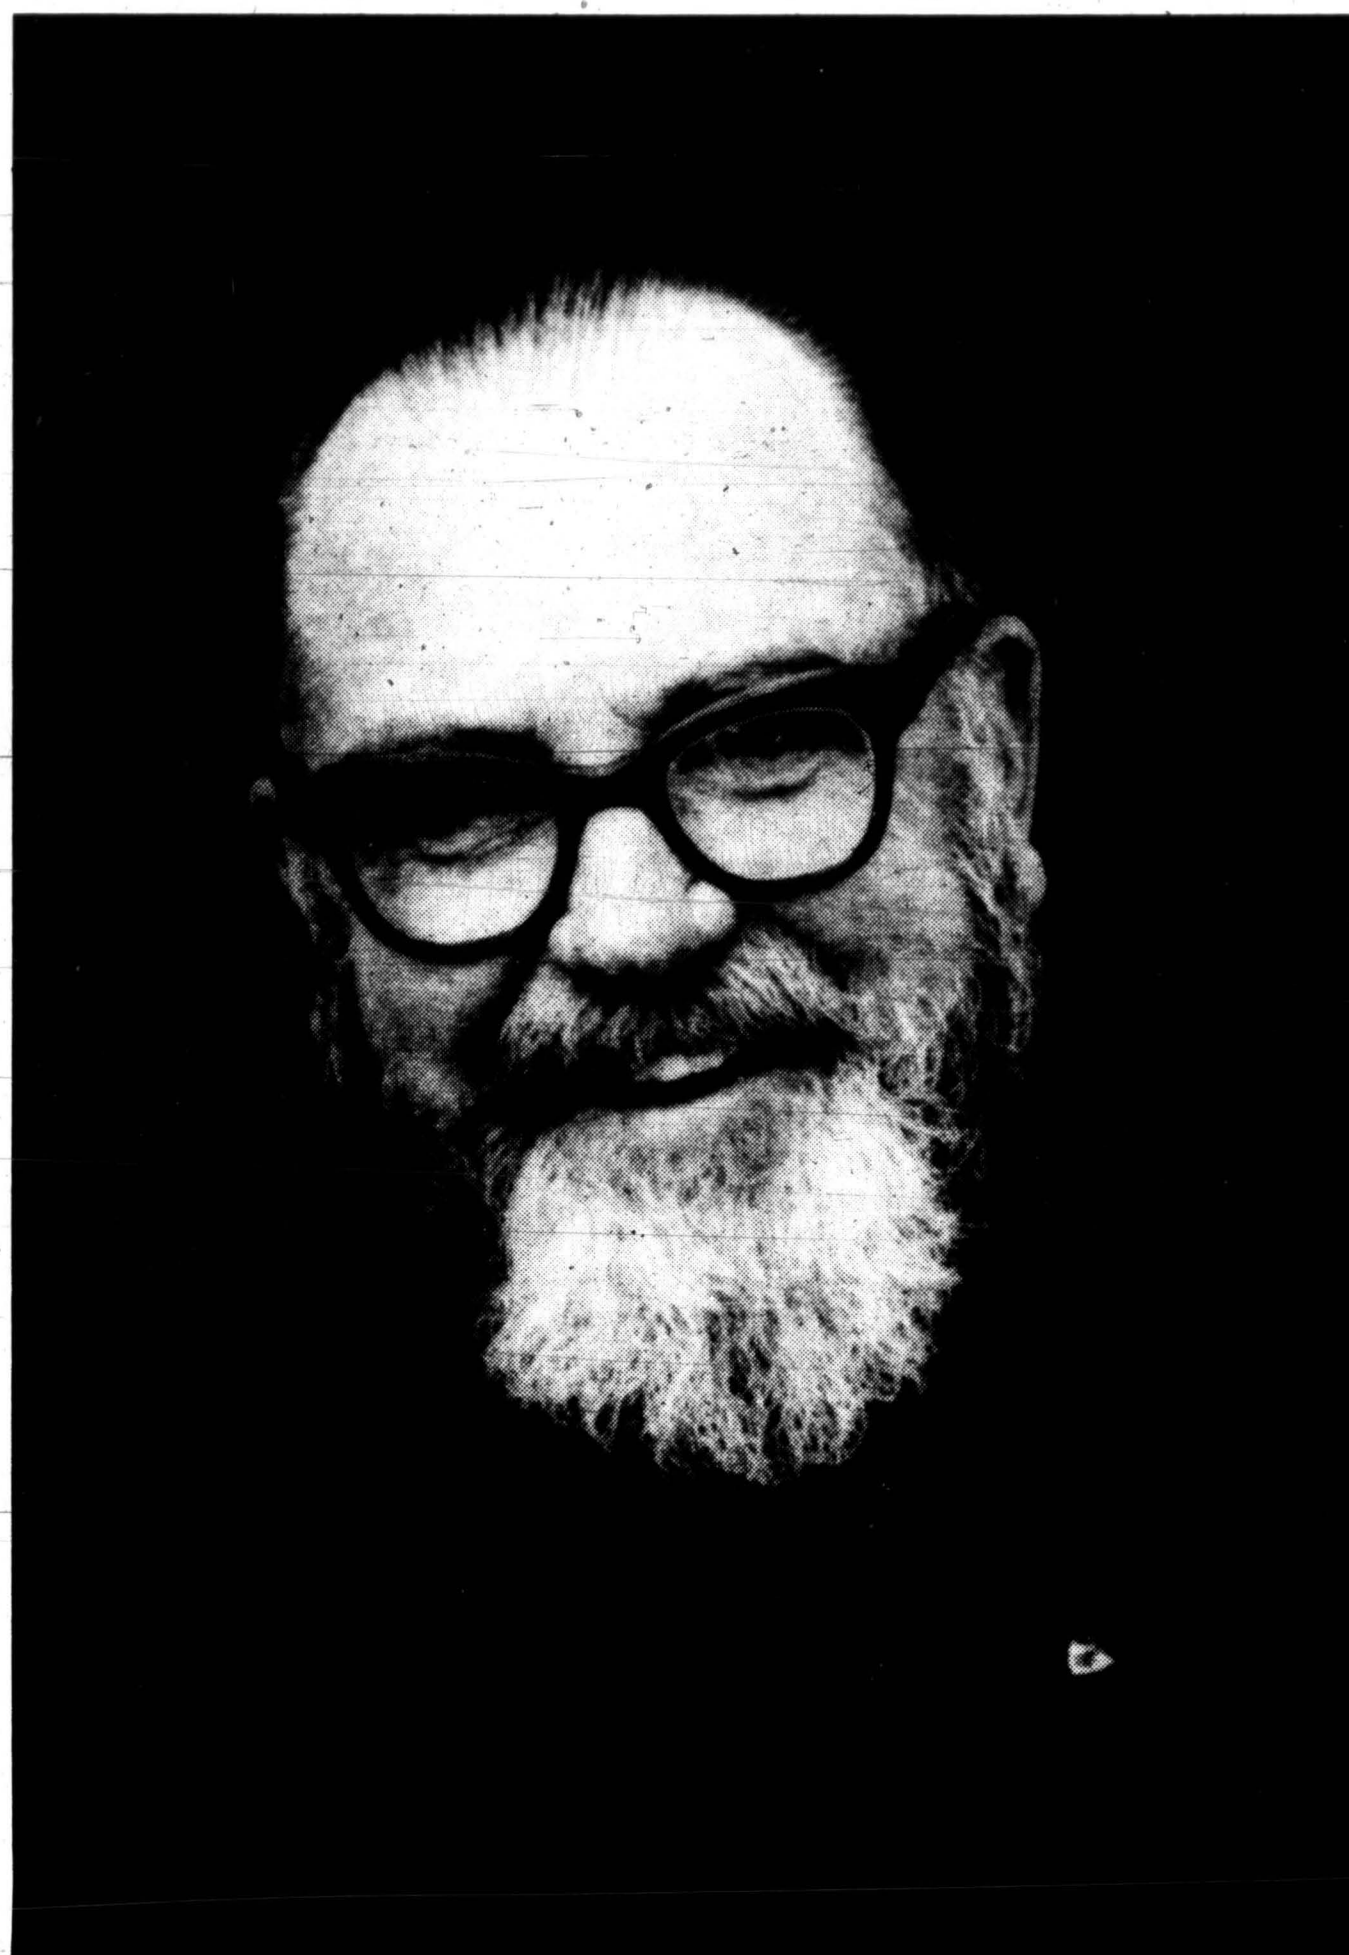

After his retirement from prison work in 1974, he helped out in parishes along the central coast of California. On July 4, 1977, the 40th anniversary of his ordination, he threw a picnic to honor the occasion in the Memory Garden behind Pacific House. The place was packed.

'He loved parties. He loved public gatherings of all kinds. And, as is clear from any person who has talked to me about him, above all he loved people. When he died here three years ago...the passing of Father Lawrence H. Farrell elicited a spontaneous outpouring of loss and loving remembrance seldom, if ever, equalled on this peninsula.'

any person who has talked to me about him, above all he loved people. When he died here three years ago, on July 30, 1983, the passing of Father Lawrence H. Farrell elicited a spontaneous outpouring of loss and loving remembrance seldom, if ever, equalled on this peninsula.

Did he touch people? Bud Allen, Carmel hotel owner: "He was a wonderful human being, colorful and witty. He'd call you up and say, 'Come over here and let's talk!' So a bunch of us would go over to see him in his little house there in Monterey and we'd always leave feeling better about ourselves, about everything. What a lot of people didn't know — because he was quiet about such things — is he would pay air fare for people who wanted to go, say, to Europe but couldn't afford it. We have a Fr. Larry Foundation now which helps needy people, continuing the kinds of things he would do. If all priests were like Fr. Larry, everybody would be Catholic."

Was he colorful? Peter Coniglio, Monterey attorney: "We loved to have him give benedictions at public functions because he was so colorful. He had a special kind of command in his voice. In that last year, when the old San Carlos Hotel was to be demolished, we asked him to give a blessing on that occasion. Some guys from Seattle, here for the work, wondered why we needed a priest to knock a hotel down. They found out why. He called one night and asked me to help on the 200th anniversary of Junipero Serra. As you know, he never reached it. He was a local character — colorful, humorous and profound. He created good feeling wherever he went. He kept his friends."

Did he have a good sense of humor? Russ Harris, Carmel clothier and restaurant manager: "To all of us he was simply 'The Padre.' Once he was going on a trip so I tried to get The Padre a new clerical suit. It wasn't easy. He had a 54-inch waist. So, after calling all around California, I finally located a suit that would fit him. In Philadelphia. He went on the trip with two new suits. He loved scarves. He loved berets. Anything colorful. One time he went over to the Japanese Presbyterian Church, the one by Lake El Estero, for their annual salmon feed. He dressed up in a brightly colored Mexican serape. Afterward we went back to that little house, sat up and talked all night."

"Once Don Freeman (a Carmel attorney) was getting ready to fine The Padre for a new car he had bought — so much for each tire, so much for the steering wheel, etc. The Padre says to him, 'Will you match me dollar for dollar as a donation for charity?' 'Sure,' says Don. So The Padre whips out his check for one thousand dollars. I wish I'd had a camera."

"He was incredibly generous. There towards the end he gave me his father's Elks ring. It's like he knew. He always said what he felt. He told me once, 'If you like somebody, tell him you like him. We're only here a short time.'"

WAS HE thoughtful? Al Ham, Monterey attorney and Fr. Farrell's personal lawyer: "I was involved with him in the planning for the party he wanted thrown after his funeral. He loved parties, as you know, and he wanted this to be a very special one. So he kept it a strict secret until the end of the funeral Mass when one of the young priests turned around and read the invitation. My dilemma was to guess how many steaks to order. I finally ordered 350 and noticed there were only 30-35 left over at the end. One of the last things he said to me was, 'The people will be fed.'"

"Whenever I heard Father Larry was going to be a speaker somewhere, I'd make sure I'd be there. He was colorful; he was eloquent; he was totally fascinating."

Did he have charm? A. Kenneth Yost, Carmel educator, retired: "I was thoroughly impressed with the panorama of his interests. You could hardly bring up a subject on which he didn't have something to contribute. His curiosity seemed limitless. He could chat with anybody. He had feeling for everybody. He was never in a hurry with people. Once I watched him seated at a banquet with a group of older ladies. When the dinner broke up, that whole table stayed seated, chatting and talking earnestly with The Padre. He had a warm glow to him."

Was he aware of his roots? Dr. Jerry Martin, Pacific Grove physician and Father Larry's personal doctor: "I first met him in 1941 in County Sligo, Ireland. His mother's folks came from there, you know. Well, I was just a teenager and Father Larry and my brother, Justin, were both in the British Air Force. They were there on leave and played golf at our local course. He was quite an impressive man even then. He was chaplain for the 59th Newfoundland Heavy Regiment Royal Artillery all during the war, you know. The vestments he wore during the war years and the chalice he used at Mass are still honored in a special shrine there in the city hall of St. John's, Newfoundland. I came to Monterey in 1961. We used to throw a joint St. Patrick's Day party every year."

Leon Bloy, a French writer, once wrote, "The presence of joy in a person is the infallible sign of the presence of God." What shines through in all that I have read and heard about the late Fr. Larry Farrell, who liked to refer to himself as "The Paisano Priest," was his joyousness.

It was not bought at an easy price. He fought and won a long battle with his own alcoholism. He considered himself somewhat of an outsider among his fellow Catholic clergy in the central coast area. His life contained its share of the disappointments and frustrations that are an inevitable part of our shared human condition.

WHAT FR. Farrell was able to communicate to those whose lives he touched — and there were many of them — seems to have been precisely that shared human condition, a sense of its worth, of its value, of our belonging to each other. More than most of us, he celebrated his own humanity.

The inscription on his tombstone in San Carlos cemetery, where he lies buried next to his parents, reads simply: "Lawrence H. Farrell. Died Monterey, California. July 30, 1983. A Catholic Priest. Ora Pro Me."

And in the Memory Garden behind the Pacific House, adjacent to the Custom House Plaza, there is a bench honoring Fr. Farrell, placed there by the Monterey History and Art Association. A plaque on the bench is inscribed with these words by a good friend of Farrell's, Ted Durein, Carmel writer: "The Reverend Lawrence H. Farrell, Monterey's public Priest — 1907-1983. A true paisano, native son of Monterey and jealous guardian of the old pueblo's rich heritage. Army chaplain, prison padre, parish priest, linguist, poet, painter, sculptor, historian, writer and wit, equally at home at pulpit or lectern. Bon Vivant and great humanitarian. A kindly man and much loved."

Did he leave a legacy? Al Eisner, Carmel publisher: "I felt a deep sense of personal loss when Larry died, partly because of his wit, his charm and his other well-known attributes. But mostly it was for his wisdom and insight into the character of the human being. He reminded us, repeatedly, week after week, that we should try to be kinder to our fellow human beings. I can say, for one, that the message had its effect. He made me stop and think about my own behavior and, I believe, over a period of time, I modified it in the light of his continuous reminder. The legacy is still with me, for as I enter new phases of my life and meet new people, I hear his words. He was a saint."

Projects may be delayed if quota is exceeded

To apply for a permit, the district needs working drawings and evidence the project is near beginning construction, explained Michael Ricker, demand management coordinator. "I won't issue a permit for something that is starting in a year," he said.

A PARTIAL list of projects that do not yet have water connection permits in the city include the senior citizen housing project on the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue, Ray Freschi's four condominiums and commercial remodel on Junipero Avenue, Earl Walls' condominiums on Junipero Avenue and the Goold building remodel on the corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue.

The public restroom in Devendorf Park has its permits and will be connected, said Carmel staff planner Brian Roseth.

"We're caught in a Catch-22 situation," said Freschi. They have been working as fast as they can to get approval for their project, he said, but it took over a year at the Carmel Planning Commission to get as far as they are.

"There must be a better way than a moratorium," he added.

When the district can lift a moratorium, Buel said, will probably be discussed in "great detail" during the Aug. 11 board meeting.

"The ordinance is not clear on how it will deal with that point," Buel said.

In the past years, California-American Water Co. has supplied the district with water use figures once a year. Beginning in August, Buel said, Cal-Am will provide the figures on a monthly basis.

That will allow the district to check water use in the jurisdiction monthly rather than annually, he explained, and the board may decide that if the monthly water figures are below the figures for last year it can lift moratorium. But that is simply conjecture, Buel warned.

Since the water district has never put a moratorium on connections before, water district board chairman Dick Heuer pointed out that there "are no precedents" for the board to follow if it is necessary to impose the moratorium.

"Historically, the board has referred all allocation policy questions to the water district Political Action Committee," he added.

The PAC consists of representatives from each water district jurisdiction. If the board imposes a moratorium, the refinements may be worked out with that committee, Heuer said.

Carmel's allocation was determined along with all the other jurisdictions in the water district in 1981 when the water district divided up the "water pie." Each city and Monterey County submitted figures on its present and future water needs to the district before the allocation was set.

Carmel businessman reapplies for permit for office expansion

MATT LITTLE could be making another appearance before the Carmel Planning Commission soon.

Little has reapplied to the city for a permit to add 3,000 sq. ft. of office space for his Carmel Insurance Agency above Simpson's Restaurant when the restaurant and the Carmel Sands Motel are rebuilt.

The Carmel Planning Commission is scheduled to review the request Aug. 20.

Last year, Carmel City Council approved the Little family's application to demolish and rebuild their aging motel and restaurant located on the corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue after months of controversy over the plan. The office space had been a part of the original application, but family spokesman Matt Little withdrew those plans before the city council hearing.

"I have just applied to move the Carmel Insurance Agency from its present location to my own building," Matt Little said. "It's a permitted use in that zone."

The entire Little family owns the motel and restaurant, but Matt Little is the sole owner of the insurance agency, currently located above Nielsen's Market on the corner of San Carlos Street and Seventh Avenue.

Two developments to be reviewed by planning commission

TWO MAJOR potential development sites, the R-4 zone and Bennett property, will be the subject of a special Carmel Planning Commission meeting next week.

It will be the first time the entire planning commission has reviewed these two special projects. The meeting is scheduled for 4 p.m. Wednesday, July 30 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

As the the largest piece of developable land left in Carmel, the R-4 zone has been a subject concern and numerous meetings by the previous planning commission and representatives of the property owners.

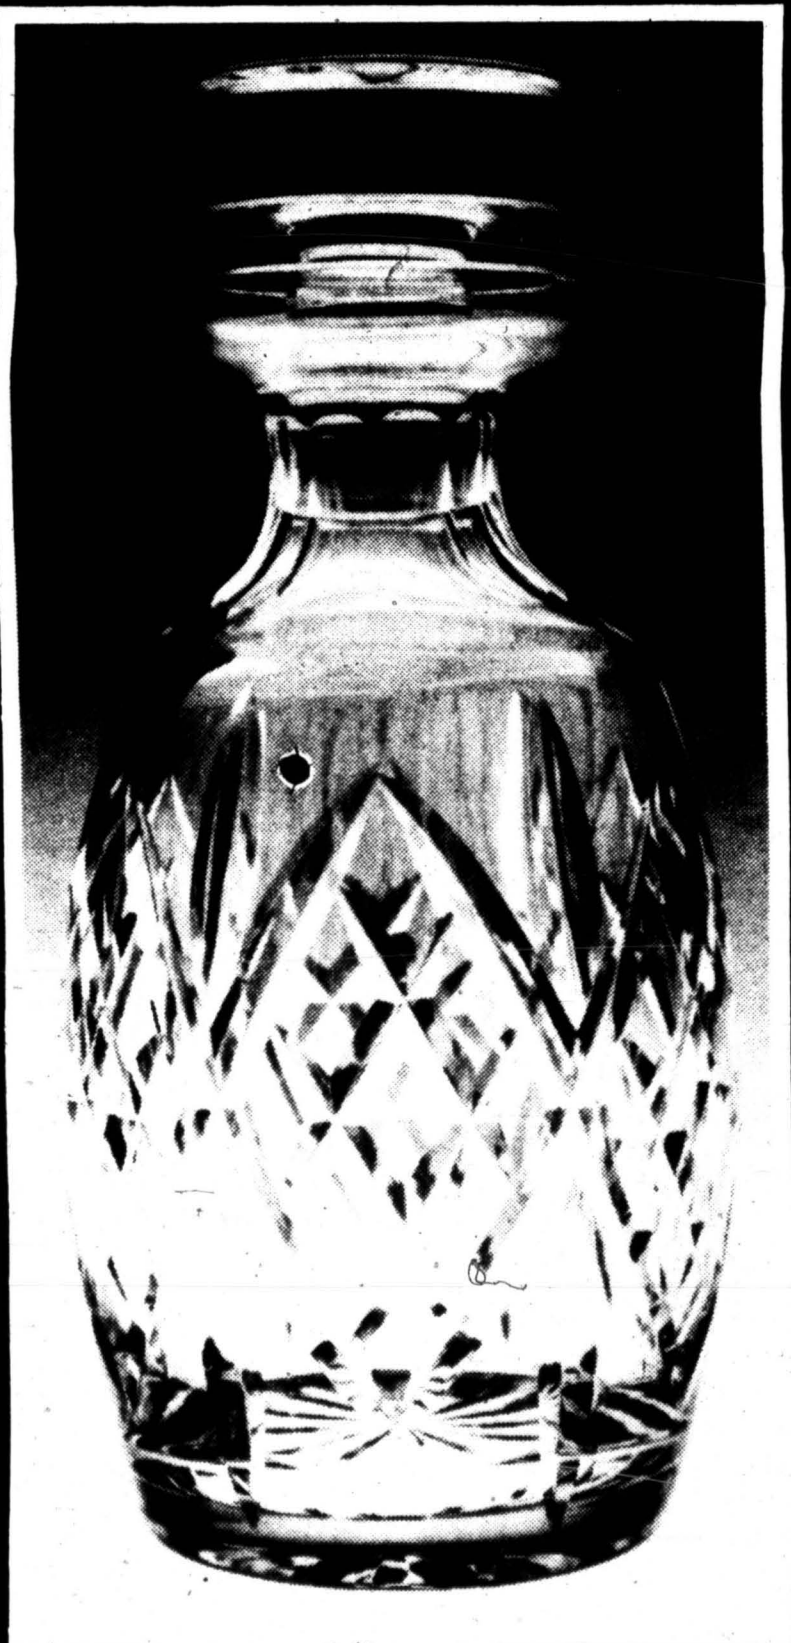

The area encompasses the two blocks between Torres Street and Junipero Avenue, two blocks between Third and Fifth avenues, the south half of the block bordered between Junipero Avenue and Mission Street and Third and Fourth avenues, and the north half of the block between Fourth and Fifth avenues.

The zone incorporates a diverse group of businesses and uses, including the Hayward lumberyards, a gas station, laundromat, paint store, The Chimneys condominiums and the city police station. It also borders the residential zone and has some excellent views of Point Lobos. All these factors have contributed to the difficulty of developing an acceptable plan for the area.

Keeble rejoins commission after a 12-year hiatus

By NANCY HILLS

FRED KEEBLE is back doing something he never thought he would do again.

He's become a Carmel Planning Commissioner once more. Nothing new. Keeble spent 18 years as planning commissioner, from 1956 to 1974, while working as an architect on the peninsula.

"I felt it was a duty, but I never thought I would do it again in a hundred years," he laughed. "However, I supported the theory the commission needed a change and if I support the theory I have to support the responsibility that goes along with it."

So Keeble didn't say no when nominated by Mayor Clint Eastwood and confirmed by the Carmel City Council June 3 along with six other new commissioners — Ken White, Bruce Roberts, Olof Dahlstrand, Ed Hicks, Bill Brown and Carla Ramsey.

Keeble, who started his practice here working for architect Robert Stanton, remains a practicing architect with the firm of Keeble and Rhoda in Monterey. Through the years he has been involved in such projects as the remodeling of Carmel City Hall, Monterey Peninsula College and La Playa Hotel.

A hip operation had him down for a month, but not out, and though he missed the June meetings he was ready for action and answered "here" to the commission roll call on July 9.

As a member of that regulating board, Keeble said he feels his duties center on overseeing the "control and development of the business area, but at the same time recognizing the rights of the owners of property to develop it in a reasonably financially feasible manner." Control is the key word, and not prohibition, he said, then added, "You can't take a guy's property away from him."

"Inconsistent changes in the zoning ordinance" and "overkill" in the general plan and city ordinances are two reasons Keeble cites for supporting changes in the commission.

The general plan, he said, is now an "extremely complicated document" that is overly technical and obtrusive into people's daily lives. Keeble said that has probably led to confusion when applicants get involved in the city planning process.

A simplification of both the plan and ordinances is a "good idea," he said.

KEEBLE ALSO also feels sometimes inadequate administration of the design review process and its standards has allowed the building of a few inappropriate structures in Carmel. That is a primary concern of Keeble, a concern he focuses on large commercial buildings.

"I feel that design of large projects should be varied to visually reduce the size of the projects."

Keeble explained that "The Chimneys (corner of Junipero and Fourth avenues) is an example that, per se, the detail and material are acceptable.

"However, using the same design and material for the entire project is not acceptable. Such a structure should be broken up using varied detailing or design for various portions of the building.

"The Cottage Row project (corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue) creates a similar problem. Whereas the Tuck Box (Dolores Street) is an example of detailing that is acceptable for a small building, it becomes objectionable when extended to a project the size of Cottage Row. It's just too much."

No structure should extend over 80 feet (street frontage) without a setback or change in material and detail, Keeble said.

"That prohibits the appearance of large

There will be a second run!

CALTRANS HAS granted conceptual approval to a second running of the Big Sur International Marathon, according to Sam Karas, chairman of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. Caltrans now will review the list of proposed conditions on the race, which were recommended by supervisors Tuesday afternoon. The conditions include stipulations that the race must be run April 26 and be over by noon. The number of participants will be restricted to 3,000 and the organizing committee also volunteered to place five Big Sur and Carmel Highlands representatives on its board of directors. Summer programs starting

Lyceum offers education-enriching programs

By KALINA HOWENSTEIN

FOR THE past 26 years, the Lyceum of the Monterey Peninsula has been providing "education-enriching" programs for gifted and highly-motivated children.

The lyceum is a non-profit organization that offers classes designed to complement a child's regular school curriculum. Its year-round programs are open to children in grades kindergarten through 12.

This summer the lyceum offers "Triad — The Sky Unlimited," and "July Firefly" for children in grades one through six. "Summer Music Monterey," a separate intensive six-week music workshop, is open to students in seventh through 12th grades. In addition, August summer classes covering various subjects are still open for enrollment for children ranging from grades two-12.

In its seventh year, Triad provides "problem solving and thinking projects for the highly motivated, gifted child," according to Anne Deffley, outgoing executive director of the Lyceum. This year, 150 students have enrolled in the four-week program. Children sign up for Triad either by having been in the GATE (gifted and talented) program or by having been recommended by their teachers.

Dr. Sally Patten, a state consultant for gifted children, is the principal of Triad at Carmel Middle School. The theme for Triad this year is "The Sky Unlimited." Participants receive "hands-on experience" in an emphasis on the different elements: earth, air, and water, Deffley said. The children have studied astronomy, weather, space, aeronautics, and Halley's comet.

Triad has been called "a creative blend of three forces: teachers, parents, and children." Sponsored by the Lyceum and the Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel Unified School districts, the program which began July 7 will be continuing through Aug. 1. Classes are held from 8:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. Monday through Friday at Carmel Middle School.

THE JULY Firefly program provides one week each of humanities, science, visual arts, and performing arts. It is open to all children. Firefly's theme this year is: "It's a small world," which introduces children to the different cultures of the world. Each Friday, the students have a performance or exhibit to show parents and friends what they learned that week.

Deffley explains the purpose of the July Firefly is, "to enrich (children) in performing and visual arts." Bobbie Infelise, wife of CUSD Supt. Robert Infelise, is the principal of the program, now its third year. Classes are held Monday through Friday from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Aug. 1 at Carmel Middle School.

GETTING INTO the spirit of a music program is lyceum teacher Mary Lee Sunseri as she helps students rehearse for a performance before parents. (Michael Gardner photo.)

The children make dolls, sand and yarn pictures, and other paper, clay and collage items during their week of visual arts.

Learning and performing songs, dances, drama and mime from around the world were some of the things the youngsters were taught by Maryann Schaupp and Mary Lee Sunseri during performing arts week.

"We get to touch a lot of things that other drama teachers can't," Schaupp said. Sunseri emphasized that "They all get to be an audience," as well as having a chance to be on stage.

Lib Downey, the new executive director of the lyceum, added, "It is a good break-in" for children's future experience in drama and the performing arts.

In Humanities week, children "explore the culture of the world . . . through writing, cooking, costumes and bookmaking." They explored "out and about" at Point Lobos and observed "natural phenomena" during science week.

THE LYCEUM, with cooperation from the Carmel Bach Festival, The Monterey Jazz Festival, and Robert Louis Stevenson School, provides an extensive six-week music workshop.

The Summer Music Monterey program provides three weeks each of classical and jazz music. The classical music workshop offers instruction, orchestral and ensemble playing, and study of music history and theory. The jazz workshop includes lessons, theory, improvisation, and playing. Music loving students sign up by auditioning through tapes or by being referred by music teachers.

The Summer Music Monterey program, in its 21st year, is held at RLS. It is now in its second year as a residence camp (with boarding available at RLS). The program, which began June 23, will continue through Aug. 1, including two performances. Classes are held from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

In addition to their three summer camps (Triad, Firefly, and Summer Music Monterey), the lyceum also offers miscellaneous classes in August. These are all still open, except for typing and computer. The classes include Spanish, bicycling, songwriting, art, and nature observation and exploration.

The lyceum "offers classes that complement not compete with schools," added Defley.

Classes are "geared (towards) talented, gifted, and highly motivated students," Defley said.

Following is a list of the August summer classes which are available for enrollment. Fees are $10 per class, not including additional material fees. Class locations vary. For further information, contact the lyceum at 372-6098.

BEHIND THE LINES BY MICHAEL GARDNER

The Gann initiative: A $64,000 question

PAUL GANN is at it again, this time with his initiative to cap public employee salaries that has qualified for the November ballot.

Gann's initiative — like the now famous Prop. 13 property tax-cutting measure passed in 1978 — has struck a nerve with harried taxpayers tired of double-dipping politicians and high-paid public employees.

It's so early that Gann — and no other initiatives for that matter — has not been assigned a number because measures have until July 26 to qualify for the ballot.

On the surface, Gann looks like a good deal for current state politicians since they will receive immediate salary hikes.

The Gann initiative will boost the governor's salary to $80,000 from its present $49,500 and increase the salaries of state constitutional officers (except the attorney general) by $10,000 to $52,500.

But, all state, city, county and special district employees will see their salaries capped at 80 percent of what the governor earns, which works out to $64,000.

The salary cap is not what is worrying local officials since only a few county employees and no city or school officials earn more than the $64,000 cap.

Their concern is predicated on a provision of the Gann initiative that would prohibit accruing sick leave and vacation time.

The question is whether the city, county or school district will have to buy out those employees who currently have accrued sick leave and vacation time.

That in itself will cost public agencies in the millions of dollars.

According to City Administrator Doug Schmitz, Carmel employees have accrued sick leave and vacation time valued at $510,086.22. The city does have what is called a "benefit liability account" to buy out sick leave and vacation time of retiring or resigning workers. That account totals $129,581.

By city department, the biggest accrued sick leave and vacation time falls into fire, $121,982; and police, $115,124. The smallest is public works building maintenance at $7,297.

Over in Salinas, county Auditor-Treasurer Jack Skillicorn says that the question of whether government agencies will have to pay off unused sick leave and vacation time "is of course a major concern."

Carmel resident Jack calls the wording on vacation and sick leave "nebulous — that's the real scary thing about it."

Saying that the initiative has "a fair chance" of passing, Jack predicts a flurry of legal challenges. "Lawsuits would be a reality if it passes. The lawsuits would hit immediately...You would be taking away what has already been earned."

"Really affected" in the county would be the medical staff at Natividad, Jack says. An anesthesiologist there makes $100,212 — tops in the county. The hospital administrator has a base salary of $67,390.

Regular county employees who would have their salaries frozen include municipal court judges ($70,888), county counsel ($73,188), county administrator ($72,510), district attorney ($67,740) and the public works director ($64,128).

Others knocking on the door of the potential salary cap are the public defender ($63,000) and the sheriff ($62,000).

At the Carmel Unified School District office, Assistant Supt. Vance Baldwin didn't have set figures yet. But Vance reports that there are 25 classified employees with unused sick leave and vacation time.

"That (if forced to pay the back time) will have a significant financial impact on the district," Vance said.

COSTLY CONFISCATION

Skateboards, the scourge of Eighth Avenue and shopping malls, are prohibited from Carmel schools. So when kids drop by with their boards, administrators usually store them (the boards, not the kids) in the office.

But late in the school year a board was swiped from the office after it was confiscated by an administrator. Cost to the taxpayers for reimbursement was $115 and that's depreciated value for used equipment.

Intrigued by the skateboard reimbursement and bored by a rather dull school board meeting, I thumbed through the warrants to see who was being paid how much for what.

Checking off about 20 different warrants, it was surprise inspection time for Vance, who handles money matters in the district. Vance came through with an open, accurate, detailed accounting and everything was aboveboard. It's great to report good news some times, although it doesn't make headlines.

APOLOGIES IN ORDER

Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman has always been on the up and up with us over the years so it's particularly disturbing when my magic fingers type faster than my mind and she is unfairly wronged.

Last week's column had a little speculation in it about how the county maybe could save lots of time and money if the city dropped the Carmel Valley Master Plan lawsuit. That was my line, but attributed to Karin.

Karin prior to her election supported the lawsuit and now as a supervisor has worked endlessly to ensure that the judge's orders are carried out and the Valley protected.

She has never hinted that the judicial process be circumvented, nor requested that the city drop its lawsuit on the master plan.

My penance will be two hours of listening to tapes of Michal Moore and Bill Peters espouse the virtues of Carmel Valley Ranch, Point Lobos Ranch, Days Inn and the Sheraton.

A PIECE OF THE ROCK

"London Bridge is falling down, falling down, falling down. London Bridge is..." Remember that old children's ditty?

Well, the city of Lake Havasu, Ariz. has sent Clint a plaque congratulating him on his election. Included in the plaque is a piece of granite taken from the London Bridge — the popular tourist attraction there.

Another Clint gift getting laughs at city hall these days is "Kenosha's Oscar" — a gold-plated statuette awarded to our mayor. It comes from Kenosha, Wis. — home of the Jockey underwear plant.

Obviously they want Clint to do a Jim Palmer imitation for ads.

MEDIA MANIA

Larry King's front man called the other day wondering if he could get Clint for a live show July 28 from Monterey. Larry King Live is a popular interview program on CNN.

If not, Larry may have to settle for Doris Day, Joan Fontaine, Paul Anka, Reggie Jackson, etc., etc.

Esquire magazine will have a piece on the Monterey area, including Clint of course, in its October edition due to hit the newsstands somewhere around early September.

FREEWAY EIS DRAGS

The good news is that Caltrans staff finally has finished the Hatton Canyon Freeway draft environmental impact statement (EIS) so that a decision can be made based on facts rather than emotions.

But the bad news is that the EIS now is in the hands of the Federal Highway Administration, which is looking it over to see if there are any additions/deletions to be made before the report goes public.

Ken Jones, Caltrans engineer on the project, says not to expect the report to be made public until mid-September. That's a month past the latest release date, which has been continuously postponed.

Jones has a copy of the report in the office, but said it cannot be released until the feds say so.

QUICK QUIPS

If the city and Carmel Youth Center reach an agreement, the new full-time recreation director will be paid $2,306 per month. Where do I sign up?

The city will have to pay the SPCA in the neighborhood of $2,800 to take care of lost/abandoned animals here. It's either that or start our own pound. Details at September council meeting.

Local joke is that the public restrooms in Devendorf Park will be the safest place to be in case of a nuclear attack. Clint's Carmel stone should take care of the aesthetics.

Ooops — Got a little carried away last week talking about the taxpayers' money. Library Director Margaret Pelikan points out accurately that the funds for the architect designing the annex comes from an endowment budget which is made up of private monies donated to the library.

Now it can be reported. That beautiful Post property in Big Sur overlooking Ventana Inn was bought by the U.S. Forest Service for $750,000. Big thanks to the Big Sur Land Trust for arranging the deal.

The spring recreation program Feb. 3 to June 12 reports an 80 percent payback through fees. Total cost to the city for the extensive program was only $3,674.

That Seniors Helping Seniors program offered by Carmel's PD looks like it's going to be successful. Twenty-five seniors have signed up to help each other. If you want to help out, give the police a call at 624-6403.

The mayor's select committee has voted to support efforts to block Sen. Pete Wilson's proposed measure to federalize Big Sur. Clint was absent from that session, but approved a similar resolution during a vote of the city council.

Funny topic in the Lyceum summer schedule: "Why Does the Sheraton Look That Way?" Seems like some kind of explanation is in order from the city of Monterey rather than the lyceum. Of course, Seaside's just looking up (pun intended) to Monterey for guidance.

As long as we're on the other side of the hill, can we talk Paul Anka? All the gossip columns have the singer running for mayor of Monterey along with Dan Albert and Clyde Roberson. But, Paul doesn't live in the city limits. Of course he could always follow in the footsteps of another Paul, Paul Laub, who moved into Carmel just under deadline in time to run for mayor.

As one county official said after hearing the news, "I'm waiting for Doris Day to run for dog catcher?"

Team of 18 travels to Washington D.C. to testify against bill

A TEAM of 18 Central Coast residents will travel to Washington D.C. to testify against the proposed Wilson Big Sur federalization bill at a hearing before a Senate sub-committee on public lands July 31.

Former California Sen. S.I. Hayakawa and Rep. Leon Panetta are among other elected state and local representatives who will testify along with the 18 against Senate Bill S2159, the "Big Sur National Forest Scenic Area Act" co-sponsored by Sen. Pete Wilson and Sen. Alan Cranston. The 18 are from the Monterey Peninsula and Big Sur areas and include Jim Jossoff, chairman of the Friends of the Big Sur Coast.

"The federal government cannot take care of what it already has," said Jossoff. "Federalization of Big Sur would cause far more problems than it would solve."

"Big Sur is already protected by the most stringent coastal land use protections in the nation, prepared and certified by state and local governments."

The hearing will be held before the Senate Sub-Committee on Public Lands, Reserved Water and Resource Conservation, Thursday, July 31.

A press conference is scheduled at 8:30 a.m. immediately preceding the hearing in the Mansfield Room of the Capitol building.

State's $1 million grant helps save Big Sur views

'THIS ISN'T just a pie in the sky kind of thing anymore,' explained Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman in describing the acquisition of $1 million to help protect Big Sur views from development.

The $1 million grant from the state Coastal Conservancy and a second million dollars promised for the next year will provide the first block in building a successful transfer of development credit (TDC) policy — the cornerstone of the Big Sur Land Use Plan.

"It gets us off to a good, successful start," Strasser Kauffman told The Pine Cone.

Under the plan, Monterey County will use the $1 million fund to become the "buyer of last resort" when a viewshed property owner is unable to sell his building rights.

The TDC program works this way: fictional Matthew King owns a lot in Big Sur that is considered to be in the view of Highway 1. The county calls King's property a "donor site."

To protect those views while at the same time giving compensation to the property owner, the county allows King to apply for a transfer of development credit.

King then can sell his building rights to another property owner with land outside the viewshed. That property is called a "receiver site." The buyer then — if the land meets building codes on sewer, water and density — can develop two homes rather than just one. The density cannot be more than one unit to an acre, however.

But if donor site owner King cannot sell his property within six months then the county will step in and buy the site at appraised market value.

There are conditions that King and his property must meet before the county steps in as the buyer of last resort.

First, King's property must be "buildable" — meaning that it has adequate sewer, water and road access available. The property also cannot be on more than a 30 percent slope.

King also must acquire a certified appraisal of his property and actively market the site for six months.

If all of the conditions are met, the county then will buy the site at the appraised value and attempt to resell the building rights.

Technically it is not the property that is sold, only the building rights. With the sale will be deed restrictions to keep the site open space forever.

Since the owner must prove that the site has been marketed for six months, Strasser Kauffman does not see any county buyout under the TDC program until spring of 1987.

Strasser Kauffman added that the TDC program is a favorable alternative to outright condemnation of private lands, which she opposes.

"We have never proposed to condemn private lands," she said.

Instead the TDC program is a tool to save the viewshed sites from development while at the same time adequately compensating the landowner at appraised property values.

You call this a week off?

MONTEREY COUNTY Supervisors will not meet to discuss regular business Tuesday, July 29.

But don't think they get time off.

Supervisors are just in the middle of lengthy day-long budget talks and will not convene in a regular session again until Aug. 5.

Fred Keeble back on board as planning commissioner

developments," he said.

The Carmel Plaza, which was approved during the time he was a commissioner, is an example of how varying a large street frontage helps the look of the structure, Keeble said.

Residential design review is a different matter, however, and he agrees with fellow planning commissioner, Olof Dahlstrand, that it should be abandoned.

"Design review of residential structures is not advisable, beneficial or necessary," Keeble said. "I think that the individual should be able to build his own residence to his own liking" — and a "public body" should not make that decision for him.

"I felt it was a duty, but I never thought I would do it again in a hundred years," Keeble said. "However, I supported the theory the commission needed a change and if I support the theory I have to support the responsibility that goes along with it."

Another "important" aspect of the planning commission's duties, Keeble said, is the quality of stores and how to balance issuing use permits and the control of excess uses. It is an "extremely complex issue," he observed.

Keeble noted that greatest change he has seen in Carmel over the years is an increase in "tourist-oriented businesses."

"I don't think there is any way to turn Carmel into a service area for the residents because of the economics and cost of the land. The same thing is happening in San Francisco and we can only attempt to control that," he said.

He does, however, support the policy of residential use in the commercial district, but believes "so many controls were put on each project that it made it financially impractical to build."

Another concern Keeble shares with the other planning commissioners is expediting applications. He feels regulating something such as commercial signs is an important aspect of planning, but not to "minute detail."

"The vote for Eastwood indicated a vote for change," Keeble said, "and I support his philosophy about what needs to be done."

Carmel Red Cross sets blood drive for July 31

THE CARMEL-by-the-Sea chapter of the American Red Cross and Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula will conduct a "bloodmobile" July 31 for one day only.

The blood drive will be held from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Thursday, July 31 at 137 Park Walk in the Crossroads shopping center (directly behind the Holiday Hutch), according to Phil Gray, Red Cross publicity director.

Nurses will be on duty to assist in the blood drive, Gray said, and refreshments will be served.

Gray said that each unit of blood is tested and all needles to be used are brand new and are discarded after use. Because of the publicity surrounding the AIDS virus Gray said donors are assured that "no person can become infected with the AIDS virus by donating blood," and that every precaution is being taken.

"Informed people know that doctors, nurses and hospital employees are steadfast blood donors," Gray added. "There is an urgent need so please help someone by contributing."

For more information contact Gray at 624-6921.

CARMEL VOICE

BY SAM SALERNO

A hare-raising tale

YOU LEARN more things when you have breakfast at Em Le's in Carmel. Ken and Marie Crank, owners of Em Le's, are going to market some of their products beginning with a famous family recipe for German syrup. The products will be known as "Family Treats" and their logo and label was designed by Norman Schmidke. Mr. Smucker, who sampled the syrup, told Ken he had "a winner" with that one. Good luck, folks!

A HAIR RAISER

This next one could be a hair raiser and it sounds contrived but it's true. I met Anita Hare who runs the hair salon, "High On The Hog" above the Hog's Breath and to further this play on words, she informs me that she and her ex-husband used to raise rabbits. I think it's a hairy story anyway you look at it!

HERE AND THERE

Two nice folks enjoying the sights around Carmel . . . once from Canada and one from Alabama. Jamie Moore from Birmingham and Lipda Hermalin from Mississauga, Ontario. Also met Patti Hempenius here at a motel convention from Morro Bay. Ran into Nickolas Souza, former radio jock at KRML in the early '70s and most recently teaching radio courses at Pacific Grove High School. Nick has formed Video Histories, doing personal and corporate film production. Good luck, Nick, there's a need for it here.

TWO OPEN WINNERS

It had to happen soon. Greg Norman has been a bridesmaid in many golf tournaments, it was only a matter of time before he won a big one and he did Sunday in the British Open. Greg has spent a good deal of time on the Monterey Peninsula and has many friends here, among them Dan Bohen, Mike Ayala, Bobby Moffatt, and of course, Harold Firstman, director of the Spalding Golf Tournament. Greg is destined to be a superstar. He has it all: length, accuracy, and a fine touch around the greens.

Less than two weeks after defeating Sally Little in an 18-hole playoff to claim her first career win at the U. S. Women's Open, Jane Geddes is already in search of her second major championship trophy of the year. The $250,000 du Maurier Classic on this week is not only the tour's lone Canadian stop, but represents the last of the LPGA's four major championships in 1986. This year's 14th renewal offers Geddes the opportunity to duplicate Pat Bradley's early domination of the grand slam events by leveling the score at two wins apiece. A win also would avenge a loss to Bradley on the tournament's final hole in 1985. Leading money winner on the LPGA circuit is Bradley with $311,597 after 19 events. Geddes has over $130,000 for the year thus far.

TOUCH OF JAZZ

There was a good turnout at the Reid Gallery in the Barnyard last Saturday. The champagne reception was for America's foremost bronze sculptor, Paul Wegner. They were unveiling some new sculptures along with the now-famous "Touch of Jazz" collection.

MARIN MEANDERINGS

Played a couple rounds of golf at the Marin Country Club course in Novato as the guest of Dick Buxton. Dick resides on the 14th hole and at dinner party at the club, we had an opportunity to meet Gordon Walker, developer of the Marin Country Club, a leading real estate entrepreneur of that area. Also on hand was Don Curran, formerly head of KGO TV and now with a communications group which has radio and television stations around the country, including KBOQ, our classical music station here on the peninsula and one of the top in the country.

At a party hosted by Dick and Betty Buxton, we met Art Blum, one of the top public relations men in the country from San Francisco; president of the San Francisco Downtown Association, Joe Dee; president of Brook's camera shops of the bay area, and "Kandie" Williams of Strawberry Travel agency of Grass Valley. The Marin course is very sporty and well conditioned. On hand that day at the club was James B. Reese, who was most anxious to come down to play Pebble or Poppy Hills.

TIDBITS

Bert Cutino of Restaurants Central tells me about a big shindig at the Monterey Aquarium Friday, July 25, from 7 to 11 p.m. . . . a private party for chefs and those associated with the culinary arts.

We learn that Carmelite Howdy King's great-great-great uncle was Chester A. Arthur, 21st president and vice-president during the Garfield administration.

Happy Birthday to Mrs. Wishart, celebrating number 85 last Sunday. She was the founder of Wishart's Bakery in Carmel. See you next week.

Senior citizens offered check-ups

Free health check-ups for persons over age 55 will be offered by the Senior Citizen and Nursing Services (SCANS) program of the Monterey County Health Department. Appointments are required for the check-ups, which are offered at different sites in Monterey County throughout the month.

BUSINESS BEAT BY NANCY HILLS

Clintville capers

IS THERE anyway I can write up the latest legal adventures of a certain Carmel entrepreneur without handing out free advertising for a product I objected to in a earlier column?

The answer is no, I can't — nor can I ignore the furor over who started first.

It's all over the use of the name "Clintville." Eileen Clark from The Bavarian Shop on the corner of Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue and friend Cecilia Brown, a realtor, have hired Carmel attorney Jeff Gillis and filed a lawsuit against businessman Paul Laub over the use of the word. Clark and Brown say they have a trademark on Clintville, which they put on T-shirts they sell in Clark's shop.

Paul Laub — former candidate for mayor, remember? — uses that name on one of his Paradise Building shops that specializes in T-shirts and Clint Eastwood paraphernalia. Laub said he has no idea who Clark and Brown are, and adds they have never talked to him.

IT'S THE Clintville was now that Eileen Clark, left, manager of the Bavarian Shop on Dolores Street, and her partner, realtor Cecilia Brown, right, have filed suit against Paul Laub for his use of the term "Clintville" in his shop on Ocean Avenue. Clark and Brown say they have a trademark on the word Clintville, which they use on the T-shirts they sell in the Bavarian Shop.

Clark and Brown said they started selling the T-shirts (with the trademark) the day of the election (April 8), while Laub didn't start using it until May. Laub said he started using it around the building on April 1 — which is two days before he dropped out of the election. Besides, he said, you can't trademark a name. A logo yes, but not a name.

The idea for Clintville came up in casual conversation one day before the election, Clark said. They thought it was a cute idea and went around town to make sure that no one else was using the idea. No one was, she said, so they trademarked it and started having T-shirts printed.

"We wanted to do a quality product," Brown added, and they ordered what they consider the best T-shirts around, Hanes Beefy T's.

Laub named his store Clintville after the election — around the last week of May was the first time I heard it called that, as I recall.

Laub said he won't stop using the name Clintville on the store.

"It's been in Life magazine — it's known internationally by that," he said.

Which is one of the problems Clark and Brown are having. Their product is also internationally known because of interviews on CNN during the election, they claim. The publicity produced orders as far away as Saudi Arabia. The Bavarian Shop is also harder to find than the Paradise Building, so people looking for the Clintville product usually find Laub's first.

Brown said they would like to put the T-shirts in other stores and, in fact, they offered to license them to Laub, but he didn't take them up on it. Laub said he only got a telephone call from an attorney who never mentioned the offer for licensing.

There's a hearing Aug. 1 in Monterey County Superior Court to determine if there is a case.

And have either one talked to the gentleman whose name they are using? Not that I know of.

BOOKS AND LOOKS

From what I can ascertain, Brentano's bookstore is scheduled to open Aug. 15 in Carmel Plaza — subject to the store remodel going smoothly, of course.

From conversations with various people within Walden Book Co., of which Brentano's is now a subsidiary, the store is planned as an upscale bookstore with a little of every type of reading material available. However, it will have an emphasis on art and photography books.

No one was exactly sure what it will carry in the non-print department, but everyone said that the old pre-Walden Book Co. Brentano's gift section with museum reproductions won't be included in this store.

PEPPERCORN POPS

Brentano's may not be ready yet, but Don Seydel is and his newest shop with the name of Peppercorn should have opened Wednesday in the lower level of Carmel Plaza. It took over the former location of The Left Bank Cafe and a portion of the Harbinger restaurant.

Seydel said his newest Peppercorn — with the added title of "in the Plaza" — is "very, very much like Byron & Schiller."

Byron & Schiller was a contemporary home furnishing store in the Plaza that closed earlier this year. Saks Fifth Avenue took over the space.

The Peppercorn is also a contemporary home furnishing shop designed to fill the void left by Byron & Schiller, Seydel said. It features everything from a "fly shooter" to bathroom accessories, lots of glassware, travel bags, home storage units, stationery, placemats, "a lovely supply of candles," picnicware and some kitchenware — primarily scissors (I'm not sure what that means). There's no silverware, though.

They will also have the rubber stamps Byron & Schiller had, but the stamps are still in transit so won't be there for the opening, Seydel said. I personally don't know anyone that uses rubber stamps for home furnishing but it could start a trend. Maybe giant rubber stamps for end tables. If you don't want to use rubber stamps, they do have some patio furnishings.

The shop is not to be confused with The Peppercorn II on Ocean Avenue or The Peppercorn in the Barnyard, Seydel's contemporary kitchenware stores. Both will remain open.

If you go to the Plaza shop, check out the floor. It's made by Pirelli — you know, the tire people. For a floor, it corners well. (Bad joke, but don't let it keep you awake at night.)

All in all, Seydel said the look of the place makes it the "most spectacular store in Carmel."

NEW NEIGHBORS

We're getting new neighbors up here. By we, I mean The Pine Cone. There's a new business moving in right next door, on the second floor of the Gould Building on the corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street.

Pacific West, consisting of Penny Daniels and Ron Strawn, is taking over one of the rooms that used to be an apartment. Their computer and business consulting firm has been located for about a year, Daniels said, in Pacific Grove.

Daniels, former bank officer, explained she writes programs for businesses on "IBM-compatible" machines for just about any need a business requires — a task which makes her banking background come in handy, she added. Her repertoire includes inventory, payroll, sales, cash handling and much more.

Strawn is a technical writer, management systems designer and computer consultant.

He explained that means he advises businesses on the hardware system best suited for them, can design a management system in conjunction with the hardware and maximize both the machines and human beings, he explained. Not in those words, of course. The most "cost-effective system" is how he termed it.

Strawn can also write the technical training manual that goes along with the system and, being a technical writer, said he can advise on and develop word processing systems.

SHELLEY AND MOM

From Cannery Row to Carmel, Shelley & Mom & Company

is coming to The Court of the Fountains on Mission Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

Shelley and Mom are really Shelley Aliotti and her mother, Virginia Smith. They work together in their "cottage industry" which turns out handmade fabric applique on quilted wall hangings, clothing, towels and whatever else can be transformed into cloth.

They're opening a shop in Carmel, she said, because they don't need the heavy tourist traffic Cannery Row gets.

Aliotti designs the appliques and seamstresses at the Cannery Row shop (over The Outrigger) and in private homes, put them together.

Aliotti said she can reproduce anything including logos, photographs, names, a home or building into a fabric picture. (Carmel Cafe on Mission Street has one of her wall hangings in it.)

She has done work for private individuals, for small businesses and large companies, including a design of the Sardine Factory for owners Ted Balestreri and Burt Cutino.

If you don't want to order something special, the shop has some of her works in fabric such as baby towels, quilts and other children's goodies, pillows, wall hangings, a new line of applique clothing. And more.

She isn't sure what she to do with the shop on Cannery Row yet so it is still open.

BEEN HERE AWHILE

Have you ever been at the Monterey Bay Aquarium and enjoyed the "hands on" exhibit, been startled by the wave crash tank or seen the macro video display? If you have, you've seen the work of Carmel architect David Loesing. Loesing, who now has an office upstairs in the building on the corner of Mission Street and Ocean Avenue, told me he's been bouncing around the area for a while. But it's news to me so he's going in the column.

SPINAL COLUMN

DON'T SUFFER WITH ARM AND SHOULDER PAIN

Shoulder and arm pain due to spinal nerve compression in the neck presents a wide variety of symptoms...depending upon the specific nerve involved.

The pain may begin as a dull ache or burning across the top of the shoulders. As the condition progresses, the pain increases, and centers about the shoulder joint where it is frequently mistaken for bursitis.

It becomes increasingly difficult to place the hand behind the back and pain is increased upon trying to raise the arm as in the act of combing the hair. Numbness and tingling may be felt in the fingers. Not infrequently a feeling of fatigue is experienced in the arm, and grasping objects becomes difficult.

Pain and stiffness may affect the large "shawl" muscle that extends down the neck to the lower mid-back and across the back of the shoulder. This muscle is partially affected when posture decay is a contributing cause of the spinal nerve compression.

Shoulder and arm pains are the most frequently recognized symptoms of structural spinal disorders in the lower neck.

A minor accident, injury or even gradual posture decay may alter the precision alignment and range of motion of one or more spinal segments in the lower neck. Should a spinal segment in the lower neck be forced out of its normal alignment or beyond its normal range of motion, the segment partially occludes the tiny nerve openings located between adjacent segments. The occluded nerve opening serves to compress and irritate the spinal nerves which pass through it to supply the shoulder and arm.

Experience has shown that shoulder and arm pain due to structural disorders respond readily to the specialized care offered by the chiropractic profession.

Travelling trunk show

ANNE ROSENBERG, Polo/Ralph Lauren buyer from New York City, was in Carmel last week with her steamer trunk filled with the new fall fashion collection and a 15-minute video of the New York fashion show introducing the new line.

According to Bill Lykins of Carmel Polo shop, the new fall women's line features a lot of cashmere and suede, with crocodile shoes and belts especially popular these days. Lykins said that Rosenberg conducts two of these fashion junkets ("trunk shows") each year, once in the spring and again in the fall, to introduce the new lines of Polo/Ralph Lauren fashions.

The Carmel Polo shop entertained customers with an array of foods, including finger sandwiches, stuffed chicken breasts and fresh strawberries, and iced fruit punch. Rosenberg packed up her trunk after her Carmel appearance to travel north to the Palo Alto store for another one-day show.

CHAMBER HOLDS RAFFLE TO RAISE FUNDS

The chance of winning a brand new Honda CRX may belong to a lucky Monterey Peninsula resident by summer's end.

The Marketing Committee of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce is raffling off a sporty new Honda CRX in an effort to raise funds for various committee projects.

The raffle began Fourth of July weekend and will continue until the grand prize is drawn Sept. 4 at The United Way's annual kick-off drive. A portion of the proceeds will be given to The United Way of the Monterey Peninsula which benefits 25 local charities.

A major percentage of the funds raised will support special promotional activities of the chamber's Marketing Committee. These activities include area-wide advertising, tour and travel promotions, trade show attendance and membership in the Greater San Francisco Bay Area Vacation Council.

CARMEL EQUESTRIAN Amy Plomteaux took three firsts and placed in six other events in the Foxfield 20th Annual Summer Horse Show at the Foxfield Riding School in Westlake Village July 19 and 20. Riding her horse Covertine, Plomteaux took first-place ribbons and trophies in Children's Jumpers 14-17; Pleasure Horse 14-17; and Hunters Under Saddle Open. She also placed in six events and was presented the Foxfield perpetual trophy for show High-Point Junior Rider in the 14-17 Division. She will be a junior at Carmel High School in the fall and is the daughter of Craig and Laura Hamilton of Carmel. (Craig Hamilton photo.)

The Honda CRX, voted "Import Car of the Year" in 1984, will be displayed at various locations around the peninsula, including Fisherman's Wharf, Cannery Row and at special events in the Monterey area. Chances for this dependable prize are available with a $2 donation at each location when the car is present.

From 1976 to 1982, Hallett served as a member of the California State legislature representing the 29th Assembly District from San Luis Obispo, Monterey and Santa Barbara counties.

In 1979 Hallett became the first woman in the history of California to serve as a party leader in the Legislature, when she was elected leader of the Republican Caucus, a position she held until she stepped down as minority leader in 1982 to become the Republican Party's nominee for Lieutenant Governor.

Hallett is the founder of a non-profit organization, the Foundation for Individual and Economic Freedom, designed to promote the free market.

She is presently the national field director of Citizens for America, a national non-partisan civic league which promotes conservative economic and foreign policies. Odellos say proposed dam will damage farmlands

THE ODELLO family has filed a protest with the state Water Resources Control Board claiming that the proposed San Clemente Dam will "cause irreparable damage to the agricultural soil" on their Carmel artichoke farm.

The protest was filed by attorney Don Hubbard on behalf of the Odello Brothers, a California general partnership that owns the farm on the east side of Highway 1 just south of Rio Road.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and the Odellos currently are negotiating an agreement that apparently would provide the Odellos with a guarantee of sufficient water for their farming operations in return for dropping the petition.

According to water district Executive Director Bruce Buel, "The settlement would be that the water district would guarantee water in normal years in exchange they will reduce production in dry years."

The Odellos, who propose to develop 162 residential units, a restaurant and farmer's market, will use water from their agricultural operation to subsidize the development if necessary, Buel added.

If the Odellos and water district cannot reach an agreement, then the state Water Resources Control Board would serve as arbitrator, Buel said.

The county has allocated 45.68 ac. ft. of water for the proposed Odello development, which currently is stalled by the court-ordered building moratorium within the boundaries of the draft Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Water use on the Odello property totaled 525 to 540 ac. ft. last year, according to figures supplied by the family.

Buel, however, wants documentation backing up that contention.

"They say agricultural use is at 512 ac. ft. a year. There's no documentation to support that," he said. "We have requested documentation...There will be a healthy review of the entitlement (allocation) they have."

The water district has been planning a new dam on the Carmel River and a public vote on the project originally was scheduled for November but now is expected to be delayed until at least spring 1987.

"WE HAVE conducted agricultural operations on our lands at the mouth of the Carmel Valley since 1924," Bruna Odello wrote in the petition.

"We believe that the proposed appropriation (project) will result in saltwater intrusion in the aquifer which would then be pumped to irrigate our crops which would cause irreparable damage to the agricultural soil."

"The proposed appropriation may also result in eliminating or reducing the quantity of water necessary for our operations and otherwise damaging the quality."

In addition to concerns about saltwater intrusion, Odello listed three other points in her protest:

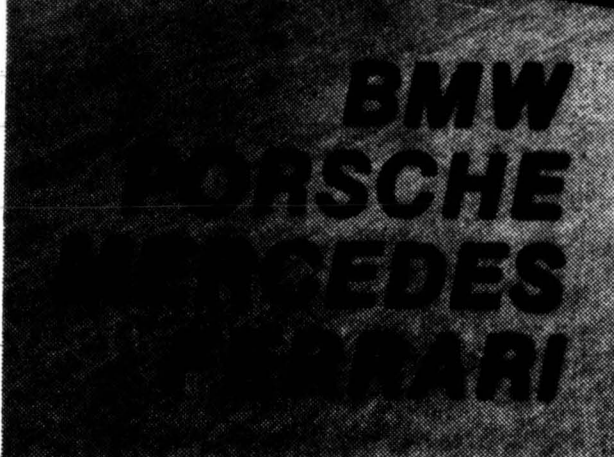

- "The proposed appropriation will result in a lowering of the water table, or, an artificial manipulation thereof which would cause irreparable damage to vegetation in the riparian corridor."

- "The proposed appropriation will alter normal stream flows thereby irreparably damaging steelhead trout habitat and the bird sanctuary at the mouth of the Carmel River."

- "The proposed appropriation may result in increased costs to protestant's agricultural operations without offsetting benefits which will force the abandonment of their agricultural operations and preclude the conservation of a large part thereof in agricultural use."

Buel discounts their arguments, saying that a dam would help raise groundwater table levels and reduce the chances of saltwater intrusion.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Cecil Sinclair of Grand Haven, Michigan, decided to celebrate his 97th birthday by taking a flyer. Getting behind the controls of a borrowed plane, the retired flight instructor, who became a pilot more than 70 years ago, took the aircraft through a 10-minute series of takeoffs, landings and turns which proved he still had "the right stuff." On climbing out of the cockpit, Cecil announced he would celebrate his 98th birthday the same way.

Dr. Michael Lemp of the Georgetown University Center for Sight warns older people to be aware of the special risk they face with extended wear contact lenses. The lenses do not cause eye infection, but they can aggravate eye conditions, says the doctor, particularly among the elderly whose tear flow is generally reduced. Dr. Lemp states that older persons should ask their eye doctors for information about the proper use and the risks of extended-wear contacts in their individual cases.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR Editor Pine Cone Carmel-by-the-Sea

The owner of Point Lobos has maintained a private estate, has not offered any part of it for sale, and in self-defense against undesirables, closed his gate and placed an entrance fee.

How about the Seventeen Mile Drive, where homes have been built, land constantly offered for sale, and commercial cars, carrying tourists who are guests from our various hotels, taxed fifty cents per head — not per car?

I stand for justice; if the law compels the opening of Point Lobos, the others must open also.

ILLEGAL KITCHENS MAY BRING ARRESTS, COUNCILMEN WARN

People who build guest houses under Carmel's strict housing ordinance and then later try to sneak in a cook stove and other kitchen paraphernalia may come afoul of the law, it was hinted at Wednesday night's meeting of the city council.

Police Commissioner Burge cited instances, without mentioning names, where violations had been made, and City Inspector B. W. Adams was authorized to unearth the violators and turn the matter over to the police department for action.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT WARNS AGAINST FEEDING RACCOONS

The following bulletin has been received from the Monterey County Health Department which is concerned with instances of persons being bitten by rabid animals.

"An excessive population of wild raccoons in the Peninsula area, particularly in Carmel, the Highlands, and Pebble Beach, has led to numerous instances of local residents being bitten. These bites are provoked through the dubious habit of offering food to these wild animals. In fact, in many cases residents have encouraged the animals to appear at certain times for handouts. This is dangerous. If any of these families of raccoons should happen to become infected with rabies it might well mean the death of the humans involved. The only safe wild animals are those which retain their fear of humans. To feed them and partially tame them only causes them to have less fear."

POISON OAK PLANT UNAFFECTED BY DROUGHT

One plant which seems virtually unaffected by this year's drought is poison oak. The plants seem as boisterous and as healthy as those that have received loving care.

The plant is a beautiful one too. But it is the number one industrial disease among agricultural workers in California and it causes the most common allergic-skin reaction in the nation.

All the damage is done by the sticky, milky resin urushiol, which is released by poison ivy and poison sumac too.

NO MEDFLIES HERE — YET

Monterey County will double the number of Mediterranean fruit fly traps in Carmel Valley as the result of authorization by the Board of Supervisors for $76,000 to combat the pest.

Agriculture Commissioner Richard Nutter said only one Medfly — a sterilized insect which had "hitchhiked" on a vehicle — has been found in Carmel Valley since the outbreak of the infestation in Santa Clara County.

Stellar photographers discuss their approach to taking portraits

By MICHAEL GARDNER

(Yousuf Karsh peered out from beneath the dark cloth and instinctively grabbed the cigar and brandy out of his subject's hands. The man scowled at the brash young photographer just as the shutter clicked — Karsh's second and last frame of the minute-long sitting. Little did the Armenian immigrant now living in Canada know that his portrait that day would become the most famous image of the late Winston Churchill, then prime minister of Great Britain.)

THE STORY by now is as famous as its principals but it begs for retelling when one discusses the life and work of Yousuf Karsh, generally acknowledged as the premier portrait photographer of this century.

Karsh, along with Bostonian Marie Cosindas (8-by-10 Polaroid still-lives and portraits), highlighted The Photographic Portrait, a four-day workshop sponsored by the Friends of Photography last week at Hidden Valley.

Churchill, Ernest Hemingway, Albert Schweitzer, Helen Keller, John F. Kennedy, Queen Elizabeth II, Pablo Picasso, Andy Warhol, Charles De Gaulle, Albert Einstein — Karsh's portfolio reads like a who's who of the 20th Century.

And for just about each portrait, Karsh has an accompanying story that he retold much to the delight of the some 100 photographers attending his workshop-closing talk the evening of July 19.

Karsh opened the slide show with a portrait of the moon mission Apollo 11 astronauts, Neil Armstrong, Buzz Aldrin and Michael Collins. The image, later used for a commemorative medal, was taken at the launch site with Karsh wearing a "Karsh — No Contamination" badge of authority.

That evening, Karsh and his wife, Estrellita, went out to dinner with Neil Armstrong and his spouse. During dinner conversation, Armstrong asked about the Karshes' extensive travels.

Mrs. Karsh incredulously questioned why Armstrong was so curious since he was the one who had been to the moon. Armstrong replied, "But my dear, that's the only place I have been to."

Ernest Hemingway was living in Cuba when Karsh went there to photograph the celebrated novelist. Always one to do background checks before the photographic session, Karsh asked a Hemingway acquaintance for some information.

The friend revealed that Hemingway's favorite drink was a daiquiri. That night, "a revolution broke out" and Karsh was sent sprawling in the bar under gunfire.

Needless to say, Karsh missed his dinner appointment with Hemingway.

The next morning Karsh went to Hemingway's home. After offering apologies, Karsh was asked whether he would like a refreshment. Remembering, Karsh tried to be impressive by ordering a daiquiri. "Good God, at this time of day?" boomed Hemingway.

Despite the troubles, Karsh got the photograph, a straight-on portrait of Hemingway in a heavy sweater. The photograph captures Hemingway's eyes the most, revealing a man wracked by alcohol, depression and chronic back pain. The writer later committed suicide.

Another favorite story involves President Reagan, whom Karsh calls an "extraordinary communicator."

Karsh arrived at the White House for an audience with Reagan the day the United States invaded Grenada. But cabinet member Michael Deaver came out and said the president would keep all appointments.

As Karsh was entering the oval office, Attorney General Ed Meese turned to him and said, "Karsh, the president is in a grim mood. I haven't seen him smile all day. You better take over."

Karsh succeeded with a small joke and the official White House photographer snapped an oft-reproduced image of the president laughing.

Patience is also a virtue for photographers, Karsh explained as he recalled the time he went to photograph the late Pope John XX-III. For a week Karsh waited and he even sent his photographic assistant home after being told the pope was too ill to be photographed. But just as Karsh was about to leave, he got word that the pontiff was ready and he snapped some of the last official portraits before he died.

One day, Karsh received in the mail a soldier's request for a copy of his portrait of First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt. Curious, Karsh inquired why a soldier would want the portrait.

The soldier replied that Mrs. Roosevelt visited the hospital where he lay wounded. "At the time she was the most homely woman I'd ever seen. But then after she visited and talked to us and promised to call our parents and sweethearts to say we were okay — I thought her to be one of the most beautiful women in my life."

On the other side of the world, Karsh arranged to photograph the heads of state of the Soviet Union. At that time, there was an upcoming party member by the name of Leonid Brezhnev.

"MAKE ME look like Audrey Hepburn," laughed Brezhnev, later to become chief of the second superpower.

When Karsh went to photograph Albert Einstein, the two went into the famed scientist's library and talked. Karsh was taken with Einstein's "compassion."

"When I'm asked who is the greatest person I ever photographed, I have to say him. Greatness alone, without compassion, is not greatness," Karsh said.

And Karsh ends his talk with a poignant tale of meeting Helen Keller, the woman who could neither see nor hear, yet went on to become an acclaimed authoress and inspiration to the world.

"How I remember her," Karsh said. "I told her, now that I am in your presence I no longer believe that the sunset is the most beautiful. It is the sunrise."

Unlike the staid painters who influenced his early life, Karsh's portraits capture personalities. Although most of his portraits are posed sittings, Karsh has the unique and envious knack of catching his subject at the most unguarded moment, which best reveals personality and mood through his use of rich tones and depth of detail.

In a Karsh portrait, you can look into his subject's eyes and see the soul.

WHILE KARSH explores the inner persona through psychological, multi-dimensional portraits, Marie Cosindas offers a painter's view with bright colors and meticulously arranged subjects.

Her subject — whether it is a still life, actors Paul Newman and Robert Redford, or a Boston society matron — resembles more a painting hanging in the Louvre than a photograph on permanent display at George Eastman House.

What makes Cosindas' work all the more astonishing is that she uses instant color Polaroid film. Save for controlling temperature, filters and developing time, there is no manipulation of the print.

Once a painter, Cosindas started the art world in the 1960s with her tiny Polaroid studies that are meticulously arranged scenes of props set against a colorful tapestry that appear more like oils on canvas than images on film.

She forces viewers to closely examine the detail of her work much like an art student studies the textures and strokes of a Rembrandt.

"Painters were my inspiration. Painters were my teachers," she said. "I tried to make my portraits look like paintings. I like to take my subjects away from the wall and give them dimension."

Cosindas was first introduced to Paul Land's Polaroid photography in 1962. The first film had been hand-made with 13 layers of emulsion.

ARTS & LEISURE

"I fell in love with the whole idea since it was so much like painting," she said.

As Polaroid advanced so too did Cosindas, moving into the large-format 8-by-10 prints of such figures as Thomas Wolfe, Truman Capote, Imogen Cunningham and Yves St. Laurent.

Cosindas' attention to detail and orderly arrangements no doubt are influenced by her childhood — she is the eighth of 10 children in a single-parent home on the other side of the tracks in Boston. Her only private space was a small cupboard in the corner where she kept her dolls and treasures stacked neatly to maximize space.

"I've always been around ornate things," said Cosindas in describing icons from her old neighborhood's Greek church.

"We are what we have experienced and been touched by," she explained.

THAT SENSE of structure and balance carried over to Cosindas and her photographic work.

Although many of her still lifes are complicated affairs (sometimes containing more than a dozen props, Cosindas minimizes equipment use).

Her "portable studio" entourage consists of a Linhoff view camera, a couple of lenses, a pack of Polaroid film, filters, tripod and a couple of clamp-style lights.

"I don't think much about the equipment," she told the students gathered to see her prints and watch her work.

Cosindas' permanent studio is equally sparse; it is a corner of her master bedroom inside her Boston apartment. "I've never had

BACH FESTIVAL REVIEW

BY JO ANN LA TORRA

Mozart scores a triumph

AT THE END of Week One of the 49th Carmel Bach Festival season, it is Mozart rather than Bach who has come off the real winner. This season's production of The Marriage of Figaro is excellent in virtually every way, and Saturday afternoon's audience was vociferous in its response.

On the one hand, this familiar opera is a high-risk venture. Very few will be hearing it for the first time, and dreaming up ideal casts for this work is a good indoor sport. Six people will give us six different "greatest-ever" Figaros, to say nothing of the Susannas, Countesses, etc., etc. On the other hand, it is almost risk-free. Even if the cast sings like a chorus of crows, there is still Mozart's irresistible music, one hit tune after another.

Under the combined direction of Albert Takazaukas (stage) and Sandor Salgo (music), in the excellent English translation of Andrew Porter, this production crackled with wit and passion. The young cast, led by the outstanding Figaro of Jacob Will, was almost uniformly fine in the respective roles.

Ruth Ann Swenson, with a lovely, flexible lyric voice, was Will's Susanna, and they were excellent together. One truly shared Figaro's anger with the Count, his pain when he thinks Susanna is about to be unfaithful, even his happiness over finding his parents; we also shared Susanna's amused exasperation with Cherubino, and her need to teach Figaro a lesson for doubting her.

Mark Delavan as the Count, and Patricia Schuman as the Countess, were also convincing in their respective characters — the young lovers of The Barber of Seville who have come to this unhappy pass.

In the panel discussion on the opera, Takazaukas gave what he felt were the ideal ages for the characters, reminding us that they are very young. Therefore, we can expect certain emotions to be exaggerated. This cast is probably as close to the ideal ages as any of us is likely ever to hear, and it was refreshing.

Schuman stopped the show with her "Dov'e sono." What a pleasure it was to hear the reprise ornamented! It was, indeed, beautifully sung, but all the principals had wonderful moments. And the smaller roles had some fine moments, with Kathryn Cowdrick (Marcellina) and Monte Pederson (Doctor Bartolo) doing their share of scene-stealing.

Cherubino is a troublesome role. We have nothing in our tradition to help out — the young boy sung by a woman. This particular young boy has been hit hard by puberty, and has a decidedly one track mind. He is almost always played with a lot of arm-swalling awkwardness, but it strikes me that he would have been more likely at least to feign sophistication. After all, this is a noble house, not a boys' school.

Barbarina presents a related problem, a 12-year-old would-be tramp. This production left me musing on why Barbarina was so much more cool than Cherubino when she is both younger and beneath his station.

Sets were, of necessity, kept to a minimum, but it didn't matter. Balance was troublesome, but that has to be blamed on the hall rather than the musicians. With the orchestra almost on a level with the stage, the voices occasionally could not be understood through the instruments. The back of the stage was not the ideal place for the harpsichord, which should be played by the conductor, but there was no other good place for it. At least the singers were able to hear it.

But all that looms very small indeed as one thinks back on the quickly packed, exhilarating whole.

Two other Mozart works were also outstanding. Tuesday night's concert featured the 38th symphony, the "Prague," K. 504, in a lyrical, but crisp, reading. Friday's concert featured pianist Janina Fialkowska in the marvelous C minor piano concerto, K. 491. For the most part, Fialkowska's playing was restrained, beautifully sculpted and controlled. An arpeggiated passage in the first movement, the cadenza of the same movement, and one of the variations in the last movement, either got away from her or provided an irresistible temptation to sneak in a little Liszt. The slow movement wanted some melodic elaboration, but the overall effect was beautiful and the collaboration with Maestro Salgo and the orchestra was excellent. Mozart's exquisite wind writing was well treated by the players.

MENDELSSOHN IS getting some attention this year, as a popularizer of Bach with his performance of the St. Matthew Passion in 1829. The Friday concerts include his Fourth Symphony, the "Italian," in a marvelous performance. This is very classical Mendelssohn, clear and crisp and joyful. It put me in a wonderful frame of mind, which was shattered by its being followed with an encore, a very Romantic rendition of Bach's popular air from several works.

The E minor violin concerto is featured on the Monday concerts, played by Sergiu Luca, in a very personal interpretation of this old favorite.

A delightful novelty, also a lesson in the history of the symphony, was provided by the B flat Sinfonia of C.P.E. Bach, Sebastian's second son, very famous in his day and very influential on the succeeding generation of composers led by Haydn.

The fast movements were done in a highly spirited manner that would gain much from less vibrato in the strings, especially in the passage work. The slow movement needed to have more of what that period called "affect," sensitivity, sensibility — whatever. It was a very personal style and somewhat difficult for us to recover.

The works by Sebastian Bach have some problems. In the flute suite (No. 2, B minor), it was almost impossible to distinguish one dance from another. In spite of its having some quick dances, especially the bourees, there was not a really quick tempo until the famous "Badinerie" at the end, which really took off.

It was a treat to hear the harpsichord in A minor, but it would have been more of a treat if it had been possible to hear the harpsichord. As long as we carry our "authenticity" only that far, the harpsichord should be miked. That is no more of a heresy than mixing the contemporary and Baroque instruments. The defenseless harpsichord is simply no match for the flute and violin. By not breathing, and blotting out as many sounds as possible, one could detect some nice playing by Bruce Lamott, but it took a real effort.

The cantatas have been very uneven, although tenor Karl Markus dominates the proceedings whenever he is present. He has a very clear voice, very little vibrato, excellent diction, and a real sense of Baroque phrasing. Instead of the announced solo cantata, No. 55, he sang No. 189, "Meine Seele rühmt und preist," an early work.

Markus also dominated the St. John Passion (Sunday's concert) in the role of the Evangelist. Unfortunately, there was a disappointing discrepancy in the abilities of the other soloists. Altogether, the slow tempos, the massed choir sound, the heavy vibrato, together with a few other items, were too much for me, and I exited at the end of Part I.

THE CONCERT AT the Mission on Wednesday was a mixed bag of sacred music from Rome. It featured music from Palestrina to Corelli. Since most of the music was devotional, intended to be performed for a congregation rather than an audience, it tended to be a bit pale. The instrumental solos were out of place on such a concert. The heavy solemnity of the event strikes me as out of place in a humble mission, but that may be a totally personal reaction. It was a great treat for some of us to hear even a little bit of the Mission's new pipe organ.

Michael Rosenberg, with his wonderful oboe playing, has really captured the hearts and minds of the audiences, and it is a pleasure to listen to him. He seems totally involved in the whole work, not just his notes, and he plays with great ease. Jesse Read on bassoon and Carole Klein on trumpet are also deserving of special mention.

The afternoon sessions are both informative and entertaining. Trust me, it does not diminish the enjoyment of the music to know something about it.

Each concert has something to offer, but if you can only make it to one, make it Figaro. Otherwise, you may never forgive yourself.

Youngsters encounter music of Bach, Mozart, Bartok

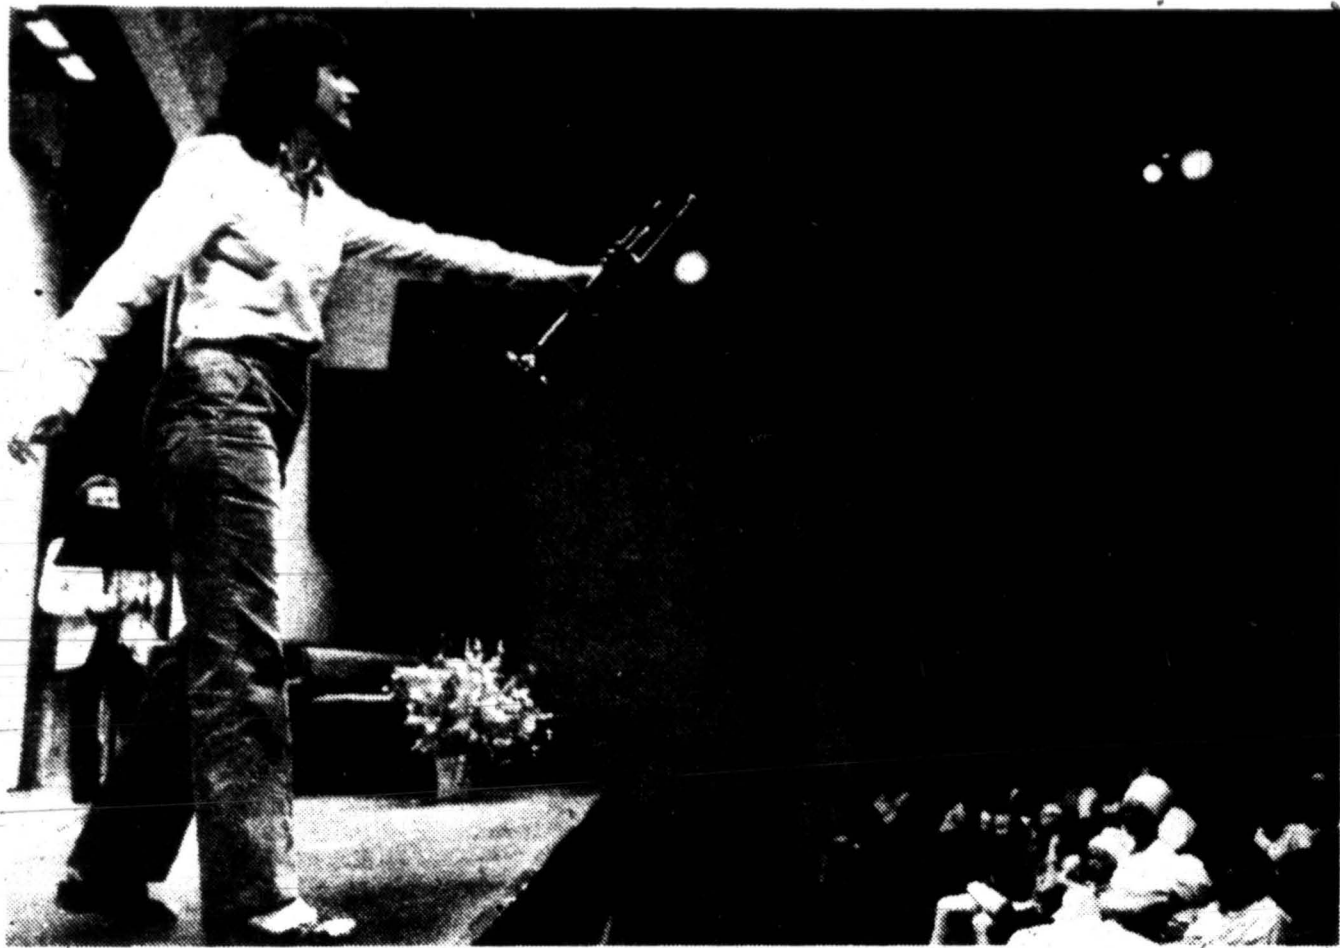

By SHAWN EVANS

'WHAT MAKES the noise?' Carole Klein asked, referring to the instrument in her hand.

"The trumpet," a young listener said, stating an obvious fact.

"Let's see," she answered, waving it cert for Young Listeners. (Holly McFarland photograph).

silently around in the air. "No, the trumpet doesn't make the sound."

The adults in the crowd roared.

The scene was the Tuesday, July 22 Concert for Young Listeners presented at Sunset Theater by the Carmel Bach Festival.

The concert is a musical event that caters to the young crowd wishing to attend the Bach Festival.

No adults are allowed past the Sunset Theater doors — unless they are accompanied by a child. This ensures that the concert stays primarily for children as intended. But some adults do try to get in. Robin Venuti, director of development and community relations for the Bach Festival elaborated. "It's fun (to see) adults grab kids in the parking lot," she said.

The concert origins go back many years, she explained, when festival organizers felt a need to consider the younger audience. To many children a typical production seemed to drag on too long, leaving them fidgeting in their seats or fast asleep. Most simply could not keep pace with what was happening around them. After all, this wasn't a concert geared for them, it was a concert aimed at adults, intended for adult listeners.

But this concert is aimed right at the young children. Clifford Cranna, musical administrator of the San Francisco Opera and Tuesday's master of ceremonies, began the concert by asking "How many of you have pianos?" Three-fourths of the children raised their hands. He pointed to the instrument on the stage. "It's a harpsichord."

Madeline Ingram, harpsichordist for the festival, explained how the instrument worked. She told the children that pegs pluck the strings, making them vibrate, "Like a guitarist plucks a string."

The musician further explained there are four strings for each note. When one string vibrates there is a soft sound, when four strings vibrate it is loud.

Ingram played four pieces: My Lady

Carey's dompe, an anonymous work; Two-part Invention, No. 8 in F by Johann Sebastian Bach and Peasant Dance and Merry Andrew by Bela Bartok.

Cranna next introduced the Carmel Bach Festival Brass Choir, explaining that a choir is composed of "instruments playing together like singing."

Three types of brass choir instruments were used: trumpets — Carole Klein, Catherine Murtagh, and William Holmes; French horns — Glen Swarts and Loren Tayerle; and trombones — Craig McAmis, Suzanne Mudge and John Russell.

'The children's concert is a good example of what makes the festival different. Children of today are our audience of tomorrow. They deserve the best our culture can offer.'

Cranna then introduced the operatic part of the concert, selections from Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's The Marriage of Figaro. The first selection was in Italian, the other three in English.

A few youngsters who had started to grow weary, soon sprung to alertness when one of the characters from the opera jumped off stage (through a make-believe window) and ran into the audience. Children turned to each other in excitement and pointed, exclaiming "Wow!"

The program exists to give the children an idea and basic understanding of the festival's music. After all, Venuti added, "It would be short sighted not to address those people."

a professional studio. I've had a professional kitchen, a professional bathroom," she laughed.

Cosindas rarely makes more than a dozen images. Since the prints are Polaroid with no negative, she has "alternative" photographs but never are two exactly the same. Reproduction is made through a dye transfer process.

Her resilience in limiting equipment paid dividends when she was forced to abandon her heavy 4-by-5 view camera for a lighter 35mm when photographing in China in 1980.

Unencumbered by not being married to heavy lenses and cameras, Cosindas used a Nikon body, a couple of lenses and 100 rolls of film to create some of the most impressive candid photographs of the Chinese ever taken.

Early in her career Cosindas did make a game try at the f-64-style black and white detailed photography pioneered by Ansel Adams and the Weston family.

Cosindas went to Adams, who soon realized that his style was not hers. "You don't think in black and white. You think in color," Adams told his student.

And she has ever since.

An exhibit of Karsh's work is now on view at the Weston Gallery in Carmel. Cosindas will exhibit her work this autumn in Santa Barbara. Karsh has published more than a dozen books, his most recent titled Karsh: A 50-Year Retrospective. Cosindas has produced one hardbound book, entitled Marie Cosindas: Color Photographs.

This annual Bach concert stalks a youthful audience

In the previous years of the concert these youngsters would pack Sunset Center tight for the 60-minute concert.

"Short time for short (attention) span," was the organizers' objective, Venuti explained.

She added that summer schools would give children half a day off and bus them into Carmel so they could attend the show, some students arriving from as far away as Salinas.

Not as many children show up now as before, the reason given being Proposition 13 cutbacks, Venuti stated.

Schools and day care centers can no longer afford to bus the children, and working parents find it hard to make the drive back and forth. The result has been a decline in attendance at the Concert for Young Listeners since its inception 15 years ago, she noted.

But as attendance has declined, costs have risen, even though the admission price has never increased above 50 cents. For the first time in its duration, the Concert For Young Listeners has a sponsor, the Mervyn's Foundation.

This slight decrease in people to perform for hasn't dampened the spirits of the musicians and staff, however. Klein, director of the brass choir, hasn't noticed any real change in the audience number since she's been playing trumpet in front of the crowd for the last few years.

"The children's concert is a good example of what makes the festival different," she confided. "Children of today are our audience of tomorrow. They deserve the best our culture can offer."

Klein's philosophy is shared by many of her fellow musicians who travel to Carmel from around the country.

"Some of the principal players give private lessons at the schools... This is one way we have to share with them (the children.)"

Back on stage she asks her question once again. "What makes the sound?"

Come next year and maybe she'll tell you.

ADMISSION REMAINS just 50 cents during the Concert for Young Listeners, a staple of the Carmel Bach Festival. Adults are admitted only if accompanied by a child. This year the concert was underwritten by the Mervyn's Foundation. (Holly McFarland photograph).

THEATER REVIEW

BY LINDA CARSON

The good ship 'Anything Goes'

SO YOU HAD a bad day. Your cat is up a 20-foot pine tree. There was no milk in the fridge this morning for your cereal. Your mind is somewhere between the ozone layer and the twilight zone due to a work day of dealing with stress test situations. You need something nice to happen.

Do yourself a favor and attend the Monterey Peninsula College production of Anything Goes by Cole Porter. There is nothing like a good old fashioned toe-tapping musical to put a song in your heart. The musical occurs on a three tiered wedding cake-style luxury liner uniquely crowned with the orchestra bound for fun, outrageously zany circumstances and of course sweet romance. The music is great. The romance peppery and full of laughs. It will make your bad day easier to bear and a good day ever better. Your cat will come down and your spirits will go up. Besides, have you ever seen cat bones in a tree?

Dilemma — something is missing in scene one — that smooth-flowing pizzazz. That Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers zing was not there. I do believe someone temporarily left it on the poop deck. Although it was soon retrieved in scene two when the cast appeared to have warmed up and that rigid beginning faded.

Billy Crocker played by Kevin Hanstick is a dear charming young man who is usually in more trouble than Lassie. He plays his ever-changing role very nicely. Hope Harcourt, the only girl in possession of Billy's heart, is played in a sweet engaging way by Diane Renner. Her enchanting, well-studied voice is a joy to hear as she first sings "The Gypsy in Me." Talented Michael Robbins is ornery public enemy Moonface Martin traveling incognito as a bishop, trying to successfully outwit the law. Robbin's comic timing is flawless through the entire play and his Moonface rendition of "Be Like the Bluebird" is a comic highlight. His zesty, attractive sidekick Bonnie is enthusiastically performed by Sandy Wheatley. Connie Ross is spicy as entertainer Reno Sweeny. She performs "I Get a Kick Out of You" with a beautiful, clear natural voice.

Reno, who could turn a man's heart into a mushy cupcake sitting in warm milk, boards ship with her four Angels who tap and sing wonderfully but tend to lose their smiles during various dance numbers. Keep smiling gang, don't let us know it hurts.

RICHARD CELLA portrays a jolly good pip pip of a British gentleman, Sir Evelyn, soon to be wed to sweet Hope. I tip my derby to Cella. Jolly good show old boy. Nancy Kocher

Monterey County Symphony awards threescholarships

SCHOLARSHIPS were awarded to three students at the annual meeting of the Monterey County Symphony Association on Friday, June 20. The recipients of the $500 awards are Elizabeth Parrish, Robert Padgett and Donald Padgett.

Elizabeth Parrish is a 16-year-old Salinas resident and is studying the violin with Mary Lou Galen. She has performed as a student player with the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra for two seasons. She has also played with Carmel Bach Festival Instrumental Lyceum, the Monterey County Youth Orchestra and the Fresno Philharmonic Music Camp. This will be her third season with the Hidden Valley summer instrumental music seminar.

In the past, she has competed in two California Music Educator judgments, receiving superior ratings both times, and has received junior string division scholarships. Elizabeth also finds time for tennis, riding and travel.

Donald and Robert Padgett are 17-year-old brothers residing in Pacific Grove. They will be seniors at Robert Louis Stevenson High School next year and study violin with their father Owen Dunsford, assistant concertmaster of the orchestra. They also study piano with Sally Magee.

The Padgetts were selected as two of eight players from California to perform in the National School Orchestra Association's National High School Honors Orchestra last April. They are participating in the Congress of Strings being conducted by the American Federation of Musicians at Columbia University in New York this summer. Both Robert and Donald enjoy a variety of hobbies including fishing, golf, tennis and shooting.

The Scholarship Fund was established by Mrs. Cecil H. Barker to assist in the musical education of young people residing in Monterey County. Through the fund, any qualified student musician is given the opportunity to gain performing experience as a member of the orchestra and/or receive financial assistance in his or her musical studies and endeavors. To date, the Monterey County Symphony Scholarship Fund has awarded more than $10,000 in grants to young musicians since 1972-73.

Limited jazz fest tickets available

MONTEREY JAZZ Festival Founder and General Manager James L. Lyons has announced that selected season tickets (for its five shows, Sept. 19, 20 and 21) are still available for the 29th edition of the country's premiere jazz event, but that these tickets are not expected to last through the July 30 sales deadline.

These tickets are available only by mail order and those who wish to purchase them should send a cashier's check or money order for $64.50 per ticket (plus $3 per order for handling) or contact the festival offices at P.O. Box JAZZ, Monterey, CA 93942, (408) 373-3366.

Lyons also announced the addition of nine artists to the line-up for this year's Monterey Jazz Festival. Richie Cole and Alto Madness, Bobby McFerrin, Bob Florence's Limited Edition, the Art Farmer-Benny Golson Jazztet, Frank Morgan, Claude Williams, Joe Kennedy Jr., Jiggs Whigham, Jackie Coon, Bosko Petrovic, Eiji Kikumura, the Keio Light Music Society Jazz Band and Time Five will join previously signed artists Stephane Grappelli, Tito Puente's Latin Jazz All Stars, John Lee Hooker, Etta James, Rare Silk, Linda Hopkins, Joe Liggins and the Honeydrippers, the Capp-Pierce Jugger-naut Band, Dianne Reeves, Bruce Forman, Mundell Lowe, Hank Jones, Clark Terry, Red Holloway, Monty Budwig and Vince La-teano to celebrate the 29th birthday of the country's oldest continuously presented jazz festival.

The Monterey Jazz Festival, which traditionally draws artists, music lovers and press from around the world, will be held Sept. 19, 20 and 21. It is a non-profit, educational organization responsible for more than $500,000 in donations to music education and the creation of a jazz education program in the local schools.

The 29th Annual Monterey Jazz Festival is sponsored by MCI Telecommunications, whose contributions to the festival have helped further the efforts of its jazz education programs.

Registration accepted for Monterey Bay 10-K

Runners . . . mark your calendars. September 21 is Monterey Bay 10-K Day, beginning 9 a.m. at Lovers Point, Pacific Grove.

The Monterey Bay 10-K's registration drive has begun. Entry forms are available at sporting good stores and at Ford's in Pacific Grove, the pre-race headquarters.

This 10-K is one of the best attended, most scenic runs in the area. Last year 1,800 runners raced from Lovers Point, around the bay edge, past the lighthouse, the sand dunes and historic monarch butterfly homes.

The Monterey Bay 10-K is a fund-raiser to benefit Beacon House in Pacific Grove, a non-profit privately funded recovery program for those with alcohol problems.

The Monterey Bay 10-K is a TAC certified run. It's a competitive racers' run. A team run. A fun run. If you've never run a 10-K, start with the Monterey Bay 10-K. Every registered runner gets a T-shirt screened in five colors with the beacon light. Awards will be presented in all classes, and there's a drawing for merchant-donated prizes for all pre-registered runners. Five-member teams consisting of all men, all women, or coed runners are encouraged to enter, and must be pre-registered.

For more information, call race director Ed Engquist at 649-0082.

ART NOTES BY SAM COLBURN

Beach blanket babylon

THE MONTEREY BAY Aquarium threw a swell "beach party" on June 28 to introduce its second art gallery exhibit.

This show was "hung" by Ilene Tuttle, the curator, and consists of bathing suits going back to the edge of the 19th century.

Mannequins modeled this attire for the sea that evening, and as you entered the aquarium, young people dressed in these early, immersion clothes played badminton in the entrance foyer.

Two gentlemen blew on their horns, and there were drinks and hot dogs. The latter were a foot long.

In those early days exposure was minimal for the ladies. There is one figure, that of Annette Kellerman, floating overhead in a black outfit that covers her from neck to foot. She was ostracized in those days because this bathing suit revealed her figure.

May the following lyrics bring a picture of swimming in that age:

*By the sea, by the sea, by the beautiful sea;
I love you, you love me, oh how happy we'll be.
As the waves come a rolling in;
we will sink or swim and it's roll around the water.
OK it's over and under, then up for air. I love you, you love me, so what do we care?
By the sea, by the sea, by the beautiful sea.*

This exhibit will be shown through Sept. 28.
